SUBPOENA BIG SUGAR OFFICIALS

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The House committee investigating the Sugar Trust to-day turned down a request presented by Senator Smoot that Joseph F. Smith, head of the Mormon Church, be excused from testifying before the committee.

When the committee met to-day Chairman Hardwick announced that Senator Smoot had requested him to excuse the Mormon leader, saying that Thomas F. Cutler of Salt Lake City could supply the information desired from Smith as to the Utah-Idaho sugar company.

"I move that Joseph F. Smith be ordered to appear before this committee," said Chairman Hardwick. The motion was unanimously carried.

The committee then resumed its examination of Charles R. Heike, who again answered a number of questions about the American Sugar Company with "I don't know," or "I don't remember."

The committee finally got the witness to admit that the Havemeyer family, by distributing its stock to independent beet sugar companies, was able to control these companies.

Subpoenas were issued to-day for these witnesses to appear next week before the committee: Alfred Harrison and Charles K. Harrison of the Franklin Sugar Refining Company, Philadelphia; Horace Havemeyer, New York; Charles B. Warren, Detroit; Chester S. Sloley, Denver; John E. Harper, Cleveland; Joseph F. Smith of the Mormon Church and Jerome E. Cutler, Salt Lake City; John D. Spreckles and Adolph Spreckles, San Francisco.

Mr. Heike said nothing about free trade in sugar, and this aroused Mr. Fordney, a Republican member of the committee. Mr. Fordney asked Heike if it was not necessary to have a prohibitive duty on raw sugar so as to protect American industries.

"I would give them about twenty years to get out of it," said Mr. Heike.

"Oh, hell; we will all be dead by that time," said Fordney.

Heike's free trade talk caused James M. Beck, attorney for the American Sugar Refining Company, to tell the committee that Mr. Heike's views must not be accepted as those of the company. After the committee had asked Heike a few more questions and elicited little information he was excused.

Lowell M. Palmer, a former director of the company, was then put on the stand. The committee asked Mr. Palmer a series of questions about freight rebates, but he seemed to know little more than Mr. Heike about inside affairs of the big corporation.

Senator Penrose's immediate subject was the resolution which he offered some time ago instructing the Attorney General to institute proceedings against the officers and directors of the Standard Oil Company and the American Tobacco Company for violations of the criminal sections of the Sherman antitrust law, in accordance with the recent opinion of the U. S. Supreme Court in the Attorney-General's opinion there have been such violations.

"What reason can be given by any sworn official for not enforcing his oath against them in order to bring them to the bar of justice?" he asked. "What excuse can any lawmaker or any executive official give for failure to enforce this law? A deliberate refusal of officials requires the government either to enforce this law or to repeal it.

"What respect have these oil and tobacco men for the law? What respect have they evinced to comply with the order of the court. John D. Rockefeller's guilt was marked by a greater number of victims across business careers, but ruined by his unlawful methods than that of any man in the industrial history of this country and yet he goes unwhipped of justice. It would seem that the fruits of the victory against these combinations would be lost to the government and the people unless they were followed out by criminal prosecution.

"One of these men behind the bars will do more toward restoring the majesty of the law than everything that has been done by the Federal Government in the last generation. It is high time that the American people should understand whether the Stars and Stripes are to be the emblem of their power and authority or whether that emblem shall be the oil barrel and the tobacco tag."

NEW REVOLT IN PORTUGAL

MADRID, June 15.—Revolution is reported to have broken out in Portugal.

Advices received here to-day state that as the result of a mongrelize among the garrison at Chaves has revolted, killing the commandant, and that the monarchists and mutineers have stormed and destroyed a republican newspaper plant. The revolt is said to be rapidly spreading toward the Spanish frontier, and many Portuguese refugees are fleeing into Spain without waiting to secure passports.

Chaves is located in Trat Os Montes, on the Tamega River. It has a population of 10,000 souls. Chaves is forty-four miles west of Braganca and boasts of a fine old Roman bridge of eighteen arches. It is noted for its hot saline springs.

Advices indicate that the Portuguese government was not taken by surprise by the uprising, for it has been making preparations for revolt for weeks. Orders had been issued mobilizing the army for "inspection and reorganization." The real object of this move, however, was to safeguard the new republican government against monarchist plots.

Government agents learned that monarchists were massing their forces about Chaves, where large quantities of ammunition and arms have been stored. Republican troops are at present en route there to strengthen the garrison.

Captain Cuocire and Commander Coutinho, two royalist leaders, moved off with a detachment of their troops yesterday, going in the direction of Braga, an important frontier post.

Rumors of unrest from Ponte de Barca and Montalegre have also led to the sending of republican reinforcements to those points.

Captain Concoire seems to be in command of the operations of the royalists along the frontier.

The government has sent a large quantity of artillery from Lisbon, stationing the guns at strategic points along the northern frontier.

DEFENCE IN GRAFT CASE ON

SALEM, June 15.—The defence opened in the Lawrence graft cases to-day with a complete denial of the accusations made in the confession of Fred L. Snow against the three other defendants.

Following the addresses to the jury, Michael J. Flynn, chief clerk in the Lawrence street department and one of the defendants, took the witness stand in his own behalf. In answer to his counsel's questions he denied specifically meeting Snow more than once, taking money from him, asking for it or having it offered to him.

The State closed its case at 10:45. William J. Bradley counsel for Flynn, addressed the jury to outline the defense. Mr. Bradley denied Snow's confession totally. He said he would prove that Flynn met Snow only once, that Flynn never had any talk with Snow in regard to padding the paving block bills, and that Flynn never met Snow in Holland's office and raised the amounts on the bills.

He said he would prove by Holland and by Holland's clerk that Flynn was not there.

Vahey Denies Conspiracy.

James H. Vahey, counsel for Patrick J. Lyons, superintendent of streets in Lawrence, and for Philip Holland, contractor, followed. He told the jury Snow's story was false. He denied any conspiracy to defraud the city. He declared Snow's story to be actuated by the fact that Snow was arrested in January on a charge of raising paving block bills and took this method to clear himself.

Each attorney addressed the jury for forty minutes, taking till 12:30. Then Michael J. Flynn, the chief accountant, was put on the stand. After the preliminary questions Flynn testified thus:

"I met Fred L. Snow in September or October last. Snow was telephoned from the street department office to come and see the superintendent in regard to the purchase of more paving blocks.

"Snow had supplied paving blocks for Franklin street. I told Snow the superintendent was out and that the best way to see him was to go to his house in the evening.

"Snow telephoned me at 5 o'clock to meet him at the Hotel Needham. I met him there. He had an auto. He asked me to go to Superintendent Lyons' house. I did. Lyons gave Snow an order for 100,000 paving blocks.

Took No Money From Snow.

"That was the only time I ever met Snow for any length of time, though three weeks later I ran into him on the street and told him the blocks were coming along slowly.

"I never suggested to Snow that anything be paid to Superintendent Lyons or to anyone else. I never asked anything for myself and Snow never gave me any thing.

"The story Snow told, that he gave me $250 and that I suggested getting more on account of the freight rates, is false in every particular. So, also, is Snow's story that I met him in Holland's office and had blank bills all signed by Lyons which were subsequently filled out and raised at my dictation.

"I have never ever handled these bills for paving blocks. All bills came to the superintendent from another clerk in the office, Colonel Beal. They are approved by the superintendent in the presence of Colonel Beal."

DURYEA LOSES EXCHANGE SEAT

NEW YORK, June 15. The suspension for three months of Frank W. Duryea of the brokerage firm of F. W. Duryea & Co. was announced on the stock exchange to-day.

The charge against him is carrying a clerk's account in violation of the rules.

ALFONSO IN PERIL OF BOMB

MADRID, June 15.—The great entrance to the cathedral was shattered by a bomb exploded in the Plaza de Oriente, adjoining the royal palace, to-day.

Several neighboring buildings were damaged, but no person was injured.

The explosion occurred within a stone's throw of the great explosion of May 31, 1906, when King Alfonso and his bride were returning from their marriage ceremony.

The Plaza de Oriente is immediately in front of the royal palace. The cathedral is immediately alongside the palace.

The new Cathedral de Nuestra Senora de la Almudena, to the south of the royal palace at Madrid, has been under construction since 1885 from designs by the Marquis de Cubas. It takes its name from an ancient church which stood almost opposite down to 1868.

RUNAWAY HORSE BEATS A TRAIN

People in the vicinity of Davis square, Somerville, to-day witnessed the start, and those near the North Cambridge Junction, saw the finish of an exciting race between a runaway horse and an outward bound express train on the tracks of the Maine Central Railroad, the horse winning by about two lengths.

Shortly before noon, as the train was coming through Davis square, the horse, with harness dangling, came dashing down the street and, hurdling the gates, started down the tracks, even with the train. The rails from Davis square to the junction measure a little over a mile. The horse took an early lead and kept it until he left the train at the North Cambridge Junction, when he started on a wild gallop up Massachusetts avenue towards Arlington.

He continued on until he came to a bridge which crosses Alewife Brook. When he saw the water the temptation was too much for him. He cleared the bridge rail and dove into the brook. Three or four men brought him to the bank. He was then taken to Parsons livery stable, North Cambridge, where the owner called for him.

KING AND QUEEN AT ASCOT RACE MEETING

ASCOT HEATH, England, June 15.—King George and Queen Mary again attended the races, driving to-day in semi-state from Windsor Castle to Ascot Heath. They were accompanied by other members of the royal family and a number of guests.

The alleged stakes of $25 each and $1,500 added was won by Golden Rod, Stony Boy ran second and Elmstead finished third. Five horses ran. The odds were 5 to 2 on Golden Rod, 8 to 1 on Stony Boy and 5 to 2 on Elmstead. The odds on "The Story" in the Ron memorial races were 13 to 8.

The gold cup, valued at $2,500, with $17,500 added, the chief event on to-day's card, was won by Willonyx, Charles O'Malley was second, Declare third. Six horses ran.

LAND DECISION FAVORS MEXICO

EL PASO, Tex., June 15.—The international board chosen to decide the ownership of the Chamizal tract, in dispute between Mexico and the United States, to-day handed down a compromise decision.

In Part of the $7,000,000 worth of land in the southern section of El Paso is given to Mexico, and part to the United States, and an imaginary boundary line running through El Paso north of the Rio Grande, which elsewhere forms the boundary, is fixed as the international limit.

W. C. Dennis, chief counsel for the United States, dissented from the opinion as a whole, and Joaquin Casasus, chief counsel of Mexico, from some parts of it.

In general the decision is a victory for Mexico. It was written by Eugene Lafleur his colleagues were Bertran y Puga of Mexico, and Brigadier-General Anson Mills of the United States.

OPEN WALTHAM AVIATION MEET

METZ AERODROME, Waltham, June 15.—All is ready for the great Waltham aviation meet, which began with $30,000 in prizes dangling in front of the dazzling airship competitors. The officials of the meet were busy about the field to-day seeing that everything was shipshape for an auspicious start.

The sun shot from behind the clouds and the soft breeze of the earlier part of the day made fair to slumber down to the afternoon so that the aviators would have a chance to lead off the meet with something of a spectacular character.

The feature of to-day's program was the promised flight of Earl L. Ovington who was a Blériot machine that is capable of making 50 miles an hour. Bostonians who took skyward late this afternoon may see him darting back and forth circling through the sky.

One of the pleasant things about this meet is that Boston and other cities and towns for a long radius will have a chance to see the competitors.

Just to show that his machine was in good shape, Ovington made a trial flight last evening. It was a regular pigeon flight. He shot up into the air as high as 2,000 feet at times, performed all kinds of daring feats, and made a mean time of about 50 miles an hour.

Daring Flights Promised.

Some of the time though he darted along at a much greater rate of speed. This was when he was going with the wind.

It was expected about the grounds to-day that those who patronize the Metz meet will witness some of the most sensational flying that has ever been done in New England. It became known to-day that those who have entered the competition have said that they proposed to outdo Graham White, who was the brilliant star at the Squantum meet last Fall.

"My machine is in fine shape," said Ovington to-day, "and I shall give the people of this section of the country some of the best flying they have ever seen, I hope.

"I have gone all over the machinery, so that the Blériot is ready for the initial flight. It worked in fine shape last night. I shall fly over Boston and this will be the first real aeroplane flight over Boston proper.

Shows No Fear.

"There is no danger in it, either to the people of the city or to myself. I always take the greatest precautions, because I have no desire for a bad spill, you may rest assured."

The programme mapped out for flying on this afternoon was to fly over Water

POMERENE DEMANDS TRUST PROSECUTION

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Declaring that the Standard Oil and American Tobacco companies have violated the law for more than twenty years, and that the men in control of these corporations are amenable to criminal prosecution, Senator Pomerene of the new Democratic member from Ohio, in his maiden speech in the Senate to-day, demanded that the Department of Justice begin criminal proceedings against both the corporations and their officials.

GIRL IS SAVED BY SUIT CASE

Miss Emily Pennell of this city, a trained nurse, was hit by the connecting rod of an engine of locomotive 1000 on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad to-day, but was saved from death by the suit case she carried.

Miss Pennell was crossing the railroad track at Union square, Rockland, just as the 9:30 train was crawling in. She did not see or hear the train. The engine first struck her suit case first. She fell over on the pilot and was carried twenty-five feet before the train was stopped.

She was taken to Dr. Osgood's office, suffering from cuts and bruises, but no bones were broken, so far as known, nor was she hurt internally.

GERMANY KEEPS HANDS OFF CASTRO

BERLIN, June 15. Proclaiming all responsibility for the seized Consul Gruetzch, upon which Cipriano Castro is reported to have seized Haitian waters under the German flag, the Germany government to-day washed its hands of the affair, putting the situation directly up to Haiti.

Are Spirit and Thought Identical?

ATWOOD FLIES OVER BOSTON

While you were eating breakfast in Boston to-day you probably heard a great whirring noise in the air. Yes?

Well, that was Harry N. Atwood, the daring Roxbury aviator taking a preliminary spin over Brighton Boston, surveying the situation from a landing point standpoint.

Atwood hasn't been a bit stingy with his exhibitions. Unlike the aviators at last Fall's Squantum exhibition he thinks nothing of a little trip over Boston's housetops, and to-day's was given just as an extra morning appetizer for the more ambitious flights to come later.

Later to-day Bostonians may have another look at Atwood, who may sail over the State House.

Atwood peeped down at nine cities and towns and covered 45 miles in his sail through the air to-day. After it was over he said that there were many good places to alight in Boston.

Lights in Franklin Park.

Accompanied by Dr. Percy L. Reynolds, physical director of the Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst, Atwood left the aviation field shortly before 7 o'clock. He returned to the field at 8 o'clock.

The weather conditions were ideal for a long flight, and before setting out from the field Atwood said he was going to make a long flight over the suburbs of Boston looking for good landing places. Leaving the field, Atwood at an altitude of 300 feet swung over Neponset and circled the old Franklin Field with his engine working in perfect order. Atwood circled the field eight times and then decided to make a landing and look over his machine.

After remaining on the Franklin Field golf links for a few minutes Atwood asked the assistance of several bystanders who had rushed on to the field, to help start the machine. Two men lent their assistance and the aviator soared skyward gracefully for a continued flight for good landing spots.

With graceful swoops down to an altitude of several hundred feet and soaring aloft higher than 1,000 feet, Atwood gave the residents of West Roxbury, Jamaica Plain, Brookline, Newton, Malden, Hyde Park and Readville their first sight of an aeroplane in flight over this section.

Makes Graceful Landing.

When Atwood left the machine, he decided to get a look at the aviation field at Readville before returning to Squantum. He sailed close to the field and circled the course three times starting from it. On his return to the field he circled the Blue Hills three times and then made a graceful landing on the field at 8 o'clock.

There are many good landing places about the suburbs of Boston, said Atwood after landing. The weather conditions today were the best since I have been at the Squantum field. When one knows where the good landing places are it is much safer for the aviator, for he can sail plane in safety to the nearest spot unless something very serious happens to the machine.

BILLS TO BLOCK LONG SUBWAY LEASE TO "L" OFFERED BY TINKHAM

The plans of the Boston Elevated to acquire fifty-year leases of subways and tunnels at the expense of the people of Boston will meet with the strongest and bitterest opposition when the bill comes up in the Senate next Monday.

To the protests of organized labor, the Chamber of Commerce, the Public Franchise League, Louis D. Brandeis and other leading citizens and influential organizations, many new remonstrances against the giving of any such privileges were added today.

Senator George H. Tinkham, upon whom Joseph B. Eastman, secretary of the Public Franchise League, called for assistance in defeating the long lease, has filed in the Senate two bills which he will move to substitute for the provisions of the omnibus bills that are pointed out as inimical to the public interests.

Separates the Issues.

The first of the Tinkham bills provides for the consolidation of the West End Street Railway without any increase in the dividends to be paid to the West End stockholders. The West End wants 8 per cent. In case of consolidation, instead of the 7 per cent. now being paid on the stock.

The second Tinkham bill provides that the leases of the subways and tunnels shall revert to the people after 1950. This is the measure that is being demanded by all civic and improvement associations.

Meetings are being held in many places throughout Greater Boston to express the sentiment against the granting of leases for any period more than twenty-five years, and the opposition to the Elevated plan is being solidified.

Senator Tinkham said today:

"The substitute bills are offered with a desire to clarify the situation and separate the issues. The 'omnibus' measure reported by the committee links together two separate questions. One relates to subways and tunnels and the contracts for their use, and the other relates to the unification of the West End and Elevated systems. It is proper that these two questions should be considered apart and upon their own merits. I have, therefore, offered as a substitute for the 'omnibus' measure two bills.

Conforms to Recommendations.

"The first provides for the consolidation of the West End and the Elevated without any increase in dividends to the West End stockholders. It conforms substantially to the recommendations of the Chamber of Commerce and the recommendations previously made by Chairman Hall, Chairman Crocker and Director G. Alden of the Elevated board, and provides that the stockholders shall vote definitely upon consolidation on this basis prior to October 31, 1911. No such vote has ever before been taken. It is deemed advisable, a provision increasing the security offered the West End stockholders after consolidation can easily be inserted.

"The second provides for the construction of the new subways and tunnels and for the extension of the existing leases. It provides for the expiration of all the leases upon the uniform date, 1936, as recommended by Corporation Counsel Hanson and conforms to the established policy of the State by granting the Elevated no exclusive contract rights in the subways and tunnels extending beyond a period of twenty-five years. A provision has also been inserted for the protection of the trees on Boston Common.

"The second act will go into effect upon its acceptance by the Elevated and by the voters of Boston, in accordance with the precedent established in the Washington street tunnel of 1902. The construction of the Boylston street subway, which is but a substitute for a subway in which the Elevated is already committed by law, will begin immediately thereafter. Plans for the Dorchester tunnel and the East Boston tunnel extension will be made as soon as the act passes, but the construction of these structures will not begin nor will any extension of existing leases take effect until the consolidation of the West End and the Elevated is accomplished.

Need Not Delay Subways.

"If the stockholders fail to vote in favor of this consolidation prior to October 31, however, the next Legislature will have ample notice so that coercive or other measures can be recommended to take early in the session to bring such consolidation about. No unreasonable delay in constructing the new subways and tunnels need, therefore, take place.

"The 'omnibus' measure proposes an extension of the West End lease instead of consolidation. Such an extension is not favored by the Joint board, and has been opposed by the Chamber of Commerce and by the West End protective committee. It is generally agreed that consolidation is far better than an extension of the lease.

"The 'omnibus' measure, moreover, allows one year after its passage for the acceptance of this extension, and if such acceptance is not secured the whole act, subways and all, becomes null and void. Inasmuch as the next Legislature will in all probability adjourn before the expiration of this one year period, it can easily be seen that the omnibus measure is very likely to postpone all transportation improvements until 1913, especially since the spokesmen of the West End stockholders have already declared their hostility to an extension of the lease. In this report, as well as in others, the substitute bill is vastly superior.

"Doubtless improvements on these substitute bills can be suggested, but they separate the issues and are offered at this time as a groundwork for constructive action."

SPEAKERS FOR "L" SEIZE DORCHESTER CITIZENS' MEETING

Called presumably as a mass meeting for a Dorchester subway, the gathering which attended the meeting of the Andrews Square Improvement Association held at the Ward 16 municipal building, was adroitly turned into a meeting to indorse the Boston Elevated plan to secure exclusive use of the Boston subways for a fifty-year period through legislative enactment. In spite of the vote, however, the "L" fifty-year plan was severely criticised.

It was no secret around the Andrews Square section and throughout Ward 16 that the attempt was to be made to place the meeting officially on record as favoring the long term leases which the Public Franchise League, the Chamber of Commerce, the big labor unions, Louis D. Brandeis and other public spirited organizations and individuals characterize as a monopolistic plan and one which will tie the city hand and foot for the next fifty years if passed.

Not more than forty people were present in the hall when the meeting was called to order by President Daniel J. Chapman, in opening the meeting apologized for the small attendance and attributed it to the unfavorable weather. He told of the lack in the transportation facilities to South Boston and northeaster and declared that the meeting was for the purpose of taking steps to better the transit service to these districts.

Before any further discussion took place ex-Representative William H. O'Brien took the floor, and without preliminary talk introduced resolutions to place the meeting on record as favoring the long-term leases of the Boston subways to the Elevated road, at the same time apologizing for the slim attendance to pass upon the measure. Without debate Chairman Chapman immediately seconded the adoption of the resolutions.

The next speaker, Joseph J. Leonard of the United Improvement Association, who voted with the majority of the delegates of that body for the long-term leases, admitted that the transportation committee of the association had been guests of Auditor Neal of the Elevated on a visit to the Cambridge subway and later at the City Club. He launched into considerable statistics and details, and was in the midst of his effort when he was interrupted from the back of the hall.

"I came from South Boston to hear what was going to be done about giving us a subway and better transit facilities," said the speaker who interrupted. "Without any disrespect to the speaker, I am interested in these statistics and figures as to what the Elevated can earn and now much they are in their demands. I would like to hear something about the subway for South Boston and Dorchester. That's what I came here for."

George A. Phipps, a Dorchester business man, seconded the remarks of the South Boston remonstrants. "Let's get down to the A B C facts we can understand. We don't care about the Elevated. They get nearly get what they want. What I came here for was to hear something about the Dorchester subway. I am not interested in the welfare of the Elevated. They generally manage to fight their own battles all right. Let's hear more about the subway," he said.

Ex-Congressman William S. McNary criticised the idea of calling a subway to Andrews square a Dorchester subway. "It's the first time that I ever knew that Andrews square was in Dorchester," he said. "I believe that if we are to have a subway to Dorchester that it should run to Upham's Corner at least."

He whacked the Railroad Commission and the Transit Board and declared that the fact that they had voted in favor of the long term leases did not by any means indicate that it was the local proposition. "When they made their original study of the question of a subway to Dorchester, which matter I had agitated and called to their attention, they made the most ridiculous report that was ever made to the Legislature," he said.

Best Wash for the Hair

Birt's Head Wash is made not only to clean the outside of the scalp, but also to penetrate into the pores leading to the hair roots, and thus establish a vigorous condition of health, so that the falling out of hair and dandruff is stopped.

No ordinary soap does or can do this.

You cannot clean your scalp and hair as it should be done unless you use Birt's Head Wash, which is made of white of eggs, cocoanut oil, glycerin and salicylic acid, combined with a refined soap body, delightfully perfumed.

This formula is given so you can show it to any doctor and ask his opinion of it.

In hygienic tubes 25c., at all druggists.

INDICT FATHER WHO KILLED 3

The Grand Jury of Suffolk county to-day reported an indictment for murder in six counts against Thomas Haggerty of Roxbury, charging him with the murder of his three children, Marie, Margaret M. and Anna P. Haggerty on May 3 by turning on the gas in the room where the children were asleep. Haggerty admitted the killing, but said he did not want to see his children starve. He was out of work.

There are two counts growing out of the death of each child. The first count in each case charges that Haggerty "did assault and beat with intent to murder and by such assault did kill and murder."

The second count in each case is unique in the criminal annals of the county. It is the first time in the history of the county that an indictment has been worded thus. It says, in effect, that Haggerty feloniously, wilfully and maliciously caused the death of his three children by flooding the room where they lay asleep with illuminating gas.

STUDENT SUES FOR ACID BURN

Donald H. Clarke of Holyoke, lately a student at Harvard College, has filed suit through Attorney Joseph A. Ironnison against William H. Crapo, proprietor of the lodging house at No. 374 Massachusetts avenue.

Clarke was burned by acid thrown by Crapo when Clarke and three of his college chums made an early-morning call at the lodging house to invite three manicure girls who lived there to join them on an automobile trip to Providence. Clarke claims $20,000 damages. He was burned in the face, it is said, and perhaps disfigured for life.

With the filing of the attachment in the suit comes the report the three girls involved in the case have been engaged by a theatrical company for the Summer.

Donald H. Clarke is the son of a Holyoke physician and a member of the junior class at Harvard. His companions in the escapade were Stoddard Hoffman, '14, of New York; Reginald Gants, '14, of Pierce, N. D., and Charles C. Adsit, '14, of Chicago. All four have been suspended by the Harvard faculty for the remainder of the college year.

MISS STURGIS BRIDE TO-DAY

Emmanuel Church was the scene of an interesting wedding this afternoon when Carolyn Sturgis, one of the debutantes of the past Winter and a member of the Vincent Club, became the bride of Theodore T. Scudder.

Miss Sturgis is the daughter of Mrs. Russell Sturgis of Fairfield street and in marrying so soon after her presentation she followed the example set by her older sisters—Mrs. Sidney Archer Lord, Mrs. George Clymer and Mrs. Andrew Hepburn, also her sister, Gertrude Sturgis, whose engagement followed so closely her debut. Her only other sister is Frances Sturgis.

Mr. Scudder is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop S. Scudder of Willard street, Cambridge.

The ceremony was performed by Bishop Lawrence at 4 o'clock and was followed by a reception at the home. Miss Gertrude Sturgis and Miss Frances Sturgis were maids of honor and the bridesmaids were the Misses Edith Parkman, Margaret Richardson, Susan Wesselhoeft, Katherine Hubbard and Susan Forester, sister-debutantes of the bride and Miss Margaret Warner of Jamaica Plain.

Mr. Scudder is of this year's class at Harvard. He chose his chasmate, Herrey E. Wetzel of Detroit, for his best man.

The ushers, all Harvard men and for the most part seniors, were William A. Lawrence, William D. Sohier, J., Wayland M. Minot of Boston, John A. Sweetser of Brookline, Thomas H. McKittrick of St. Louis, Edmund T. Dana and Reginald Parker of Cambridge, Robert Lee of Northampton and Franklin Clark, Jr., of Flushing, L. I. Samuel Eliot, son of Mr. and Mrs. Amory Eliot, was head usher.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, S. Clipston Sturgis. At the conclusion of their honeymoon the young couple will be at home at No. 218 East Seventeenth st., New York.

This exhibit, which is free, has been taken all through the principal cities of the South and Mr. and Mrs. Fassett of Portland is secretary and treasurer. Luther F. McKinney of Biddeford, a former member of Congress from New Hampshire, presided as temporary chairman.

NEW LOCAL OPTION FIGHT ON IN MAINE

AUGUSTA, Me., June 15.—The Maine Non-partisan Local Self-government League has been formed here to accomplish the annulment of constitutional prohibition and indorse legislation for the regulation of the liquor traffic. Dr. Seth C. Gordon of Portland is president and Frederick G. Fassett of Portland is secretary and treasurer. Luther F. McKinney of Biddeford, a former member of Congress from New Hampshire, presided as temporary chairman.

SNEAK THIEF ROBS SAFE

The police are hunting a thief who stole $100 from the safe in the liquor store of A. Anderson & Co., No. 4 Long Wharf, last night. Mr. Anderson had placed the money in a cigar box and put it in the safe, but failed to lock it up. While he was talking with a customer, the thief got behind the counter and took the money, a portion of the day's receipts. The matter was reported to the police.

ACCUSE FATHER OF KIDNAPING

PLYMOUTH, June 15.—Deputies Colbrugwood and Bate have gone to St. Joseph, Mo., to get Richard F. Smith, wanted in Brockton on the charge of kidnaping his son. He was separated from his wife in 1907, and Mrs. Smith was granted the custody of the child.

GERMAN CROWN PRINCE IN CRASH

BOSTON TRAIN WRECKED; 1 DEAD

The Montreal express, which left the North Station at 11:30 A. M. yesterday and was due in the Canadian metropolis at 10:10 last night, jumped the track near Iberville, Quebec, killing Fireman Mallett, who lived in St. Albans, Vermont.

A young woman, name not yet known, who was on her way from Boston to Montreal, is unconscious. Her arm is broken.

This news was received in a dispatch from Montreal to-day.

Engineer Fortinshan, who also lived at St. Albans, and two passengers whose names have not been given out, were injured as the heavy train bounded over the ties and plowed along the bank beside the track, but they were able to proceed to Montreal after another train had been routed to the scene and taken off the passengers.

The express from this city to Montreal runs over the Boston & Maine, the Central Vermont and the Grand Trunk, and is delivered to the Grand Trunk at White River Junction, Vt. The exact cause was making fast time until it rounded a sharp curve near Iberville, and suddenly, whether through a loose or broken rail or some other reason as yet undetermined, the engine leaped off the roadbed and plowed up the ties and the ground for yards.

The engine broke away from the tender. The shock threw the fireman out of the cab and he was crushed to death instantly between the engine and the tender.

Some of the passengers had retired in the sleeping cars and they were rudely awakened, and as soon as they could get dressed into the darkness beautify aided. The injuries of the two victims among the passengers are not considered serious. Martin was married last February.

THREE KILLED IN MINE EXPLOSION

'L' MUST PAY CITY $51,612

A finding of $51,612.50 for the city of Boston against the Boston Elevated Railway Company was made by Judge Fessenden of the Superior Court to-day.

The action was to recover for the installation of elevators and machinery at the Atlantic avenue station of the East Boston tunnel. The Elevated claimed the transit commission should pay for the elevators and machinery, on the ground that it was obliged to erect the station and approaches. The road claimed the elevators were appendices.

The city claimed the elevators were means of communication between the tunnel and the surface and the elevated structure, for which the company was liable.

In order to avoid any delay in the opening of the tunnel and the use of the tunnel and the use of the stations the transit commission agreed to pay the bill for the elevators and leave it to the court to determine which was liable, the city or the company.

New, Painless Way To Remove Stray Hairs

(Beauty Adviser.)

A powder known as delatone is rapidly replacing the electric needle for removing hairs not wanted. This is easy to apply, quite harmless and quick in action—all that is required is to mix enough of the delatone with water to cover the hairy surface, apply and let remain two or three minutes, then rub off and wash the skin.

Seldom is the second application necessary, and while druggists charge a dollar an ounce for delatone, it is well worth the cost to those bothered with superfluous hairs. Those who use delatone say that aside from banishing the objectionable hairs, it leaves the skin soft and white.

Good Value in Clothes Is Not A Question of Price, But of What You Get For Your Money

You may be so rich that you don't care what you spend for clothes—or you may need to consider the cost carefully. But you'll never be so rich that you won't care what you get for your money—nor so poor as to find cheap clothes an economy.

Buying a cheap suit and buying a suit cheap are two different things. The former is an extravagance—the latter, an economy.

We sell suits cheap, but never a cheap suit at any price. If you consider quality alone, you'll find it here at a moderate price. If you consider cost first, you'll find prices here to suit your means.

In either case, you may choose with the knowledge that you're getting all your money can possibly bring you in any store in America. New goods or your money back if that doesn't prove true.

Kuppenheimer Summer Suits

We buy Kuppenheimer suits by the hundreds. We stock our stores with them—advertise them—recommend them—sell them. We do NOT use them as a bait to draw people here and then try to sell them something "just as good."

The latest lot of these quality goods to arrive exhibits many new fabrics—the kind you don't see every day and everywhere—and the prices are not the least interesting thing about them.

$18 $20 $22.50 $25

Low Priced Suits

You'll see plenty of suits in the high-rent stores at $12.50 and $15, but they are not like these. The suits we sell at these prices are the same as the big rent payers must get $5 per suit more for.

$12.50 $15

Outing Suits

These are the coolest propositions you ever went up against. They're all wool, like everything else in the store, and the patterns are dandies. Wonderfully good values at

FAVORS A NEW VASSAR COLLEGE

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 15.—President James M. Taylor of Vassar College recommends the erection of another college on the Vassar grounds for the development of moral, spiritual and social lives.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than it's next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

4 BOYS HELD FOR CHUM'S DEATH

NEW YORK, June 15.—Four small boys, who were implicated in shooting thirteen-year-old John Miale on May 30 and hiding his body in a cellar after it had been robbed of $7.50, faced Justice Hoyt in the Children's Court for punishment. Carmine Pandolino, aged fourteen, the slayer, pleaded that he didn't know the gun was loaded when he fired the fatal shot. "He was making believe" that he was a bandit, he said. They were given indeterminate sentences.

MANY BRIDES AT WELLESLEY

The record of marriages and engagements among the class of 1911 at Wellesley has disproved the claim that higher education is a bar to matrimony. Rumor now has it that a good share of the fair girl graduates will blushingly respond "engaged" when the class roll is called Tuesday morning. Harvard, Amherst, Williams, Princeton, Bowdoin and Columbia had first honors in successfully storming the Wellesley girls' hearts.

Now that examinations are over and commencement is at hand, "engagement" parties are the great social features of the college. These vary from formal dinners at the society houses, with entertainers and guests from outside the college, to informal "kinose" sprung in the dormitories.

The beauty of these is, the girls say, the heart to heart talks that are possible, in which "when she first met him, and how he proposed, and what he looks like," can all be told with a wealth of repetition and detail.

These informal but delightful parties always close with a pretty ceremony, it is said. The engaged girl who "flosses" is decorated with two engagement rings on a red ribbon. One heart bears her name, the other the name of her fiancé. The word at these suppers is invariably "Who's next?"

The statistics at present available show that members of the class of 1911 married during their college course. They were Miss Bertha Robinson, Miss Margaret Kennedy and Miss Katherine Schott. The last named, who was married in her sophomore year, was the youngest member of the class.

Among the engagements announced are the following: Miss H. Marguerite Draper, Plymouth, N. H., to Walter H. Adams, Boston; Miss Gladys Platten, New York, to Arthur Craig, Princeton, '11; Miss Gladys Best, Brooklyn, to Alexander Clinton Chase, Brooklyn; Miss Elizabeth Hubbard, Cambridge, to Edward H. Bonsall, Jr., Harvard, '09; Miss Helen Johnson, Brunswick, Me., to Stanley P. Chase, Bowdoin, '05; Miss H. Leslie Blisdell, West Newton, to Howard Francis Bidwell, Amherst, '01; Miss L. Blanche Phillips, Longport, N. J., to George H. Burnett, Amherst, '10; Miss Janet Perotes, a former member of the senior class, to Alexander L. Strouse, Columbia University; Miss Miriam J. Cole, Kentucky, another former member, to John W. Hull, Harvard, '11; Miss Hazel L. Knowlton, Chelsea, to Aubrey B. Butler, Dartmouth, '11; Miss Eva M. Pierce, Riverside, to Henry M. Shreve, Salem, and Miss Ellen D. Longenecker, Pittsburg, to Ralph Kahmann, also of Pittsburg.

MRS. M. V. SYLVIA OF MIDDLEBORO, ON HER HONEYMOON

MIDDLEBORO, June 15.—Dr. Wesley V. Sylvia of New Bedford is on his honeymoon with his bride, formerly Miss Cristina Pratt of this town. They will live in New Bedford, where Dr. Sylvia practices. Last year Miss Pratt was graduated from the high school here, was defendant in a suit brought by the former Mrs. Sylvia in which Mrs. Sylvia claimed that the pretty school teacher had alienated her husband's affections. Dr. Sylvia filed a cross-libel against his wife and obtained a decree of divorce.

Last August, after he filed his cross-libel, Dr. Sylvia was arrested in Miss Sylvia's home by local police and by Taunton deputy. He said that he was in Miss Sylvia's home as the family physician, attending her for symptomatic difficulties. Miss Pratt's parents vouched for Dr. Sylvia's presence in the house. After Dr. Sylvia was able, under the court decree, to marry again, he hastened to wed Miss Pratt.

7 SUBMARINES ON LONG VOYAGE

NEWPORT, June 15.—The third division of the United States submarine fleet, under command of Captain Joseph C. Giddings, left the harbor today for Gardiners Island and Provincetown. The division consists of seven vessels, the flagship Grayling, the Bonita, the Narwhal, the Salmon, the Snapper, the Stingray and the Tarpon.

Almost the entire trip will be made under water and the submarines will not be accompanied, as their tenders are, by the convoy Severn. Orders were to "proceed submerged until it was necessary to come to the surface to recharge batteries, to enter port or to get a new course." The submarines are to remain about Provincetown harbor for weeks and to be self-sustaining the entire run.

$10,000 OFFERED TO MRS. MARTIN

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.—A press dispatch from an anonymous donor is offered to Mrs. James B. Martin, wife of the Harvard aviator who is considering a withdrawal of the flight of Chester A. Hamilton between New York and Philadelphia.

One of the stipulations is that after accomplishing the trip Mrs. Martin shall make a flight over the entire city. Hamilton is to start at Point Breeze Park in the Fairmount Park.

Thomas Wynne, chairman of the contest committee of the Philadelphia Aero Club, was asked the offer to Mrs. Martin in Boston.

DOVE OF PEACE FLITS OVER BUNKER HILL AS PARADE DISPUTE ENDS

If you see more than one person standing in a group about Charlestown street corners to-day the chances are they are discussing the new developments in that "Antique and Horrible" parade for Bunker Hill Day.

One feature is the new route of the parade, slightly extended over the old route, but not taking in Sullivan square or the Ellicott Social and Athletic Club.

The other feature is the heart-to-heart talk given by Mayor Fitzgerald at a tumultuous meeting of the parade management. Some of the plain talk by the Mayor was thus:

"I ought not to be bothered with these small matters.

"I am the Mayor of this city and due honor should be given my position.

"For heaven's sake, boys, fix the matter up between you."

The last was regarded as a paraphrase of the famous appeal of Little Jeff, the comic character, to Mutt, the "able kid," which is: "For the love of Mike, Mutt, be reasonable."

As Mutt and Jeff and other comic "features" are to appear in the parade, the comparison is regarded in Charlestown to-day as most happy.

New Route Selected.

The new route is as follows: Starting at 9 a. m. at the corner of Bunker Hill and Elm streets, down Bunker Hill street, Chelsea street, City square, Park square, Common, Winthrop street, Monument square, east and north sides; Hartford street, Elm, High, Monument square, south side, Monument avenue, Warren street, Thompson square, Main street, Oak, Russell, Pearl, Bunker Hill avenue, Main and Mishawum streets, Rutherford avenue and Essex streets to Hancock square, where Chief Marshal Daniel A. McVeigh, the president of the Charlestown Business Men's Association, will review and dismiss the parade.

The original route started at the junction of Bunker Hill and Elm streets and proceeded over the above streets until the parade reached the junction of Pearl and Bunker Hill streets, where it turned to the right and was to be reviewed at its starting point.

It will be noticed that this new route does not include passing by the quarters of the Ellicott Social and Athletic Club, at the corner of Main and Baldwin streets. The Ellicotts were to have a "Women of 1925" float in the parade. When the original parade route was given out the Ellicotts said: "Where do we fit?" Then they demanded that the route be changed to include their location and other parts of Ward 4. Business men of Sullivan Square also called for a perk at the parade.

Mayor at Lively Session.

A meeting took place at the headquarters of the Business Men's Association in City square. It was a warm session. The Mayor was there. He was puffed. He entered swiftly, overlooked all handshakes, tossed his hat upon the desk of Chairman McVarish and said:

"I should not be coming from the mayor's important office on such a small matter as the changing of the route of the parade. The people of Charlestown ought to attend to this matter themselves. Everything was agreeable to Treasurer Sisson, King of the association when he left my office at City Hall on Tuesday afternoon. Any protest from the people should receive the attention of the mayor's office. I came here without my lunch to settle this dispute. I am mayor of the city and due honor should be paid to my position.

"Two thousand dollars has been appropriated for the parade and the people of Charlestown are entitled to see the parade. I have left the handling of the parade in the hands of Councilman McDonald and Buckley and I will hold them responsible for the expenditure of the city's money. It is the people's money that is being spent and I am expected to give an honest return to the people for the money spent.

"In all public celebrations the representatives of the people in public affairs are held responsible for the appropriations expended. It ought to be an easy matter for gentlemen representing the people and the expenditure of the people's money for you are acting as such in this capacity, to settle the affair satisfactorily without the assistance of the mayor. I am considerably annoyed to come over here without my lunch, while all you men are smoking cigars, evidently after nibbling luncheon.

"Everything will be done in the matter as the councilmen direct. If they recommend the money be withdrawn, I shall withdraw it."

Corbett Brings Compromise.

President McVarish said they turned the whole matter over to the Mayor and committee to run. Then the Mayor grabbed a sheet of paper and wrote this statement for the newspapers:

"The position of the Mayor is as follows. The Mayor holds the members of the executive committee responsible for the proper expenditure of the money allowed for the 17th of June and will be governed entirely by their recommendations in the matter."

After the Mayor left there was more argument. Finally it was voted, 10 to 1, that the old route stand.

But at night the parade management met again and reconsidered the afternoon vote. Then it voted to extend the parade through Pearl street to Bunker Hill street, over Bunker Hill street, across to Main street, Main to Rutherford avenue to Essex street and to Hancock Square.

This compromise was effected mainly by Joseph J. Corbett, assistant corporation counsel, who conferred with Mayor Fitzgerald and the parade committee of the City Council and then with the Business Men's Association.

CHICAGO GUESTS INSPECT HARBOR

Opportunities of making Boston one of the greatest ports of the world were shown to the 150 members of the Chicago Association of Commerce to-day during their sail about the harbor as guests of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. The trip was made on the steamer South Shore of the Nantasket Steamboat Company, which was specially chartered for the trip.

The Chicago men took a deep interest in the $5,000,000 dock development plans which were explained to them as the South Shore slowed down off Simpson's dry dock and later on crossed to the New Haven docks on the South Boston side.

The opportunities for closer relations between the great grain and cattle interests of Chicago and the shipping interests of Boston were the main topic of conversation during the harbor inspection.

Circles Inner Harbor.

The South Shore sailed from Rowe's Wharf at 10.30 with 500 members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the Chicago men as their guests. The steamer made a half circle of the inner harbor, passing India wharf, Long wharf and T wharf and rounding to the East Boston side, passing the new Leland and Cunard line piers, where a million bushels of Chicago grain is stored in the great grain elevator in the rear of the piers.

After viewing the South Boston side, the South Shore proceeded down the harbor, passing Spectacle, Long and Peddock's Island and going through Quincy Bay to the Fore River shipbuilding works in Quincy. An hour was devoted to viewing the shops and works and at noon luncheon was served in the huge sail loft of the plant.

By the courtesy of Rear Admiral Bowles, president of the company, the launching of the U. S. S. Sturgeon, a Holland submarine boat, was postponed so that the Chicago party could witness the ceremony.

All preliminary work of cutting away the braces, greasing the ways and the final sawing on the last one holding the big submarine in position, was witnessed by the visitors.

Amid the din of whistles of vessels about the yard and the cheers of fully 100 people in the yard and on the surrounding shores, the Sturgeon slid gracefully down the ways and righted on an even keel in the river.

Sail After Launching.

The party boarded the South Shore at 2 o'clock for a sail along the North Shore to Eastern Point, where a tour of Gloucester harbor will be made. The party returns to Paragon Park, Nantasket, where dinner is served at 6:30 p.m. After several hours of recreation viewing the park, the boat returns to Boston, arriving about 10:30 o'clock.

The Chicago party was met at the Hotel Somerset at 9 o'clock this morning by a delegation of Boston men in automobiles and the entire party made a "Dartmouth wealth avenue, through Dartmouth street to Copley square, Boylston and through the department store district to the Boston Chamber of Commerce building. The party met in the grain pit of the chamber where an address of welcome was made by President George S. Smith of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. A response was made by President Harry Wheeler of the Chicago Association of Commerce, who joined the party for the drive into the city. He was introduced by both his Chicago colleagues and the Boston men.

The unanimous vote of both bodies a resolution was adopted regretting the absence of Richard C. Hall, chairman of the committee in charge of the tour of the Chicago Association of Commerce, who is detained in Chicago.

The party made a tour of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and then walked to Rowe's Wharf where they boarded the steamer.

Dinner at Nantasket.

The speakers at the dinner at the Palm garden at Paragon park to-night are Samuel L. Powers, presiding officer; Ex-Governor John L. Bates, Edward A. Bancroft of the International Harvester Company; Alexander A. McCormick, ex-president of the Union League and Commercial Clubs of Chicago; Colonel W. H. Mason, Charles J. Dering, chairman of the River and Harbors committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce, and R. I. Mann, vice president of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce.

To-morrow the Chicago men will be guests on an auto tour covering the "Midnight Ride of Paul Revere" with luncheon at the Brookline Country Club. The $10 a plate banquet takes place at the Hotel Somerset in the evening, after which the train leaves for Chicago.

N. H. SERVICE BOARD CHOSEN

CONCORD, N. H., June 15.—In a special wire from the home of Governor Bass at Petersboro, where the Governor and his council have been in session for several days, news is given of the appointment of the public service commission which has been kept them at a deadlock for seven months.

The commission, which has been appointed and confirmed, is made up of two Progressive Republicans and a Democrat.

Edward C. Niles, an attorney of the city, John E. Benton, an attorney of Keene, both of whom were staunch Bass adherents, are the Republicans. Professor T. W. D. Worthen, professor of mathematics in Dartmouth College, Hanover, the third man on the commission, is a progressive Democrat.

Professor Worthen's name was presented to Governor Bass as a compromise candidate in place of Raymond B. Stevens of Landaff over whom the deadlock which was broken today occurred. Professor Worthen served two terms in the New Hampshire Legislature, and is classed as one of the ablest and most prominent Democrats in the state.

BEST SHAMPOO FOR HOME USE

"For quick, easy shampooing and restoring the natural gloss to all streaky, thin hair," writes Mae Hyn, famed beauty specialist, in the San Francisco Gazette, "there is nothing to compare with a shampoo made by dissolving a teaspoonful of ammonia in a cup of hot water. It makes a creamy, cleansing lather that removes every bit of dirt, dandruff and excess oil and stops itching. It rinses off easily and the hair dries in just a few minutes.

"This splendid shampoo gives the hair a most pleasing lustre and fluffiness and will have the commendation of every woman troubled with scanty, short, brittle or faded hair.

"The alkali in soaps and ready-prepared shampoos is responsible for many scalp troubles such as dull, streaky, falling hair—often mistakenly attributed to wearing the hair."

ASK AMERICAN TO FIND BOY

Missing from his home, No. 436 West Second street, South Boston, for the past six weeks, John H. Muller, Jr., is being sought by his parents, who have appealed to the AMERICAN to assist them in locating their boy. The mother has been sick since his disappearance, and hopes if he sees this story that he will either come home or let her know whether or not he is still living.

Six weeks ago, Muller left his home, saying good-by to his mother, and as he did not return from that night, she became alarmed and a search was made for him, but without avail. A week following, his disappearance a postal was received from him at No. 1105 Simpson st., New York. No word since that time has been received from him and his parents have written that address but they say he has left. It is said that he left home with two other boys, one of the boys being C. J. Keller, who is stopping at No. 3258 Broadway, New York. A letter has been written to him but so far has not been sent to furnish the parents with any news.

Muller is seventeen years old, five feet six inches in height, weighs 128 pounds, dark complexion, blue eyes and when he left home wore a blue suit and light gray cap.

"FIRST LADY OF WELLESLEY," WHO TOOK ALL HONORS

CONSTANCE EUSTIS

"First Lady of Wellesley," elected to the highest honor in the gift of the student body, Constance Eustis of New York city, president of the Student Government Association, has also carried off the highest honors in athletics this year. She is not only a member of her class crew and winner of several "W's" in rowing events and indoor meets, but she is captain and stroke of the college crew.

From early freshman days, Miss Eustis has been watched with interest because she follows two sisters who took a prominent part in Wellesley life during their college days. Her eldest sister, Miss Sallie Eustis of the class of 1906, held the same coveted position of president of Student Government after being president of the class in her sophomore year. Another sister, Miss Helen Eustis, who graduated in 1908, was president of the Christian Association in her senior year.

Last year Miss Constance was president of the junior class, and this year she has stood at the head of the undergraduate body as their leader in the management of student affairs, and as their representative in relations with the faculty.

BREAD TRUST SPREADING OUT

With two large bakeries already taken over, the Bread Trust has startled a real invasion of Boston. As announced in the AMERICAN yesterday the trust has taken over the J. G. A. B. S. Ferguson Company and the George G. Fox Company. They become a part of the newly formed $20,000,000 corporation known as the General Baking Company which has secured twenty-one of the largest bakeries in Greater New York and a number of others in different cities. Overtures are now being made to other Boston bakeries to join the Bread Trust. So far Boston has resisted all attempts of the Bread Trust to control the Boston bread market. A bitter fight here between the trust and the indepts deals is now expected.

The new company has taken over the Fleischmann's Vienna Bakery of New York as a part of its big combination of bakeries. The company will have an issue of 7 per cent. preferred stock, $20,000,000 of common stock, and $5,000,000 of first and refunding 6 per cent. bonds. It is planned to issue at this time $10,000,000 of the preferred stock, half of the amount of common, and $5,000,000 of the bonds. The bonds have been underwritten by a syndicate under the direction of Harvey Fisk & Co. of New York.

The present owners of the twenty-one constituent companies will retain a controlling interest through their holdings of the preferred and common stock of the General Baking Company, which has been accepted by them in payment for their properties.

The new company, in a public statement, says that the real purpose of the combination is to produce an improved bread product through closer buying of materials, general economies, up-to-date methods of manufacturing and extensive advertising.

It is estimated that 70 per cent. of all the bread in the country is made by housewives and 30 per cent. by bakeries. There is said to be $270,000,000 invested in the baking business in this country.

The two Boston concerns now in this grand farce our 100,000 loaves of bread a day, about 50,000 pies and cakes. They employ about 600 hands.

MRS. SAGE INCREASES GIFT TO PRINCETON

PRINCETON, N. J., June 15.—An announcement was made today that Mrs. Russell Sage had added to her gift of $300,000 the sum of $85,000. The money is to be used in the completion of the large quadrangle in the group of buildings at the northwest corner of the campus which were named Holder Hall at Mrs. Sage's request.

AMERICAN TO LEAD SUFFRAGETTE MARCH

LONDON, June 15.—Suffragettes representing seventeen nations, members of the International Section, will march from the Victoria Embankment to Albert Hall, a distance of five miles, next Saturday afternoon in a great coronation procession. Two hundred and fifty American women will head the procession. Among the women in line will be Miss Inez Milholland, Mrs. William Lloyd Garrison and Mrs. Mitchell of Boston.

All About the Coronation.

Full details of the English coronation with new and interesting pictures will be found in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

$500 FIRE DAMAGE IN BREWERY PAINT SHOP

Fire partly destroyed the paint shop of the Hueber Brewery Company at No. 175 Terrace street, Roxbury, causing a damage of $500. The fire started on the second floor, the oils and varnish giving the firemen a hard fight before it was extinguished. The cause is unknown.

NEW HAVEN TRAINS.

Bunker Hill Day this year, according to the railroads, will be a day on which few of the regular patrons of the roads will travel. This may be argued from the fact that New Haven has announced the discontinuance of many local trains into Boston in the morning and of trains out of Boston in the afternoon. Some of the express trains will make local stops to accomodate those who wish to travel.

CATCH 10 MORE IN OPIUM RAIDS

Two more houses in the South End, one in Chinatown and the other in Columbus avenue, were raided by the police early today, and a woman and nine men were arrested, charged with violating the new law relating to opium, cocaine and other drugs. Eight of the arrested men are Chinese. They were found in the house at No. 25 Edinboro street together with a man who gave his name as William Farrell, twenty-eight, and who said he lived at No. 20 Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury. The latter is charged with having opium in his possession, while the eight Chinese are held for being present where the drug was found.

The police of the East Dedham street station, headed by Sergeants Hughes and McCluskey, searched the house at No. 625 Columbus avenue and arrested Miss Margaret Dickson, thirty-two, a lodger. Two cards of "hops," a pipe and a lay-out supposed to have been found in her room and she was locked up, charged with having opium in her possession. Miss Dickson said she came from New York a few days ago and was ignorant of the law regarding the holding of opium in this state.

The raid on the Edinboro street house was conducted by Sergeant Mosher and a squad of policemen from the Lagrange street station and twelve ounces of opium were seized. This is said to be one of the most important raids ever made in this city, as the police believe they have closed the last place where opium could be obtained in Boston.

Several of the arrested Chinese are said to have been engaged in selling opium to hundreds of young girls and men throughout the city and have become slaves to the use of the terrible drug. The crew of opium venders has been relentlessly pursued by the police and they were obliged to change their headquarters several times.

Waverly Factions Stirred by Shooting of Dog by Minister

Home of the Rev. W. B. Cannell, sketch illustrating how he shot the dog, and a Waverley policeman.

The peaceful town of Waverley is all upset over the shooting of Rex, the pet Scotch terrier of Mrs. Fred L. Holmes, wife of the president of the Somerworth Foundry Company, by the Rev. William B. Cannell, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Mrs. Holmes's friends have no hesitancy in expressing their views about "conduct unbecoming a minister," and some have even threatened to do their utmost to have him removed from the parish.

Among the many supporters of Mr. Cannell, on the other hand, there is a feeling of intense satisfaction, that their minister had the courage to take the matter into his own hands, and rid the town of what they say was a "vicious cur, and a danger to the community." Several ventured the remark that if Mr. Cannell had not shot the Holmes dog someone else would have done it before long.

Just a "Yaller" Dog.

"Our Rex was just a common 'yaller' dog," says Mrs. Holmes sadly. "He was not of any fine breed, but he was a pet. The children all loved him. He would play around with my little Louise, and with the other children. He never showed a vicious trait. He never fought with other dogs till that minister's wife came to town. He never annoyed children or passers by. And then he came out of his house when I was walking by with Rex. He shot him without warning. Supposing Rex had trespassed on a few inches on his lawn. Was that any reason for taking his life? Supposing he did quarrel with Mr. Cannell's dog, was that a sufficient excuse for him to take the law into his own hands? We hear a lot about ignorant criminals being arraigned for carrying concealed weapons, and ministers denounce such practices from their pulpits, and now that one of them is guilty of that very thing, should he go free where people of lesser station would be punished?"

Rev. W. B. Cannell's friends tell a very different story, however. They picture Rex as a second "Hound of the Baskervilles," and declare that by the shooting an end to a small-sized reign of terror has been achieved. William T. Cox, of No. 70 White street, postmaster of Belmont said today:

"Rex was a vicious cur, and we cannot be too thankful to Mr. Cannell for putting him where he won't trouble us any more. He was a menace to the community. He would frighten horses and attack people. Not long ago he upset me when I was riding a bicycle, and shortly before he spilled a man on a motorcycle. If Mr. Cannell hadn't shot him I or someone else would have done it before long."

Fifty per cent. of the Waverley police force, in the person of Patrolman John Argy, expressed itself in favor of Mr. Cannell's shooting. The other half of the force was not at his home. Mr. Argy said:

"That shooting is about the best piece of business this town has seen for a long time. I warned Mr. Holmes several times to keep the dog tied up, but without effect. A few weeks ago he kneeled down a little girl and tore all the clothes off her back before some workmen had time to interefere and save her. One time he knocked Mrs. Cannell down. I advised Mr. Cannell to shoot him long ago, but he preferred peaceable measures until he saw there was nothing else for him to do."

Mr. Cannell is believed to share the fate. "If it had not been for the fact that I was a minister I should have shot that dog weeks previous. I had done my best to settle matters peaceably. I had written Mr. Holmes a letter telling him how I felt. I concluded that latter by saying, 'If you do not tie that vicious dog I shall have to address my next argument to the dog himself.'

"My wife lived in constant terror of him. We were not safe from that dog day or night. There was no effort made to cooperate with me. Whenever Mrs. Holmes came down our street she would bring Rex with her, although she knew it would mean a fight with me. Of late we generally had tethered on our front lawn.

"We also heard that the Holmes girls were 'sicking' Rex on our dog. I did not believe this until my wife heard Doris, a fourteen years old, I believe, say to Rex 'Go for him.'"

Meanwhile Mr. and Mrs. Holmes have placed the matter before the S. P. C. A. and are contemplating further legal action.

The intensity of feeling is shown by the fact that Mr. Cannell sent his wife to Lynn for safe-keeping.

"Why do you fear for Max's safety, now that Rex is no more?" was asked.

"You never can tell," answered Mr. Cannell enigmatically, I believe he's safer away from Waverley than here."

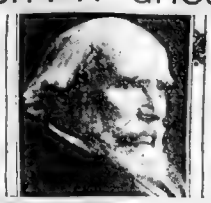
OPPOSITION TO CANADIAN RECIPROCITY A "GHOST DANCE," DECLARES JAMES J. HILL



"FIND out who got Root to introduce his amendment. Trace his antecedents. Then maybe you'll be able to account for his course.

"It's a ghost dance. The farmers of the Northwest are not opposed to reciprocity with Canada. A group of politicans up there who are being pulled by strings that lie beyond their domain are trying to excite the farmers, just as the medicine men, or snake doctors, used to do among the Indian tribes in the early days when devilment was afoot. These snake doctors would get the Indians around a camp fire and start a ghost dance that worked them up into a frightful fury. Then the Indians would go out and ravage the white settlements.

"But these snake doctors that are now trying to raise the devil in the Northwest are finding out that the ghost-dance game can't be worked on the palefaces up there.

J. J. HILL GETS AFTER MR. ROOT

NEW YORK, June 15.—"Find out who got Root to introduce his amendment. Trace his antecedents. Then maybe you'll be able to account for his course."

James J. Hill, empire builder of the Northwest, and who for a generation has been advocating reciprocity with Canada, thus addressed further discussion of the opposition of the senior Senator from his State to the Canadian reciprocity pact.

Mr. Hill was seen at the offices of the Northern Securities Company. He was pushed with business, as he always is, but he is so interested in the trade agreement between the United States and Canada that he stopped all work to talk about the subject. When reminded that opposition seemed strong among the farmers of his own part of the country he shook his head impatiently and said:

"It's a ghost dance. That's all it is. The farmers of the Northwest are not opposed to reciprocity with Canada. A group of politicians up there who are being pulled by strings that lie beyond their domain are trying to excite the farmers, just as the medicine men, or snake doctors used to do among the Indian tribes in the early days when devilment was afoot. These snake dances would get the Indians around a camp fire and start a ghost dance that worked them up into a frightful fury. Then the Indians would go out and ravage the white settlements.

Taft Told the Truth.

"But these snake dancers that are now trying to raise the devil in the Northwest are finding out that the ghost dance game can't be worked on the palefaces up there.

President Taft told the real truth about it in his speech in Chicago recently. He hit the nail on the head when he declared that [illegible] are declaiming against reciprocity with Canada.

"Wheat in Minneapolis," he went on, "was two cents cheaper than it was in Winnipeg. Its only necessary to know the two cities, even of 8b, to be the centre of the wheat industry of its section.

"It costs nine cents more, to haul wheat from Winnipeg to Minneapolis. You see, nine cents a bushel. Then how can anybody claim that reciprocity with Canada will injure the wheat industry in the Northwest or any other part of our country? Such talk is foolish. It makes me tired. It is the gabble of the snake dancers who are trying to start a ghost dance.

"You know" Mr. Hill inquired, his eyes blazing with enthusiasm, "that we now do an annual business of $1,000,000,000 with Canada? I wonder if Senator Root stopped to think about that before he adopted his queer course?

"These figures mean that we do a per capita business of $31 a year with Canada, and that the balance of trade in our favor is $10 per capita. Then how can anybody claim that reciprocity with Canada will injure the wheat industry in the Northwest or any other part of our country? Such talk is foolish. It makes me tired. It is the gabble of the snake dancers who are trying to start a ghost dance.

"You know" Mr. Hill inquired, his eyes blazing with enthusiasm, "that we now do an annual business of $1,000,000,000 with Canada? I wonder if Senator Root stopped to think about that before he adopted his queer course?

MRS. J. V. MARTIN, WHO WILL FLY IN WALTHAM MEET

Snapshot of Mrs. Martin, only American woman aviator, taken just as she was in readiness for a flight.

AIR KINGS AT WALTHAM MEET

down and Brighton and then follow the Charles River through to the heart of Boston. Then he is to fly along the water front and return directly to the Waltham grounds.

Odiorne watched the air anxiously this afternoon for a favorable condition for the flight. He has made a study of the air currents in this section, his flight last night educating him a great deal in that regard.

With his powerful 6-cylinder motor Bleriot-Arlington is prepared to do it in much rougher weather than was the aviator who entertained the New England people at the Squantum meet. He has had a great deal of experience of late also in the middle West where he has made several flights over cities.

Referring in his talk through space last night to the [illegible]

"Oh, that was just a little trip."

Woman Aviator Ready.

This meet is to be notable because of the fact that it will mark the first flight of a woman aviator over New England. She is Mrs. James V. Martin, the wife of the Harvard freshman. Mrs. Martin owns a German biplane.

Mrs. Martin made her first flight almost December and although it was but a few short jumps her confidence in her own ability to fly was such that she was finally permitted to take a biplane in the air providing she would not allow the machine to go above a height of fifty feet. This she promised and started off, but before the experienced aviators below had an opportunity to warn her she had risen to twice that height and soon had need for a period of two minutes of scrambling to earth she surprised them still further by making a perfect landing.

Since that time she has gone into the air several times and has yet to meet with a mishap. Her knowledge of aeronautics gained after weeks of careful study has now placed her in the front rank.

Mrs. Martin will fly with her husband at the Waltham meet and will also take her own Bateman biplane for an air cruise. This machine has not the power of many others, but it is equipped so [illegible] she will not attempt any cross-country flights, but will confine her exhibitions to the aviation field.

Russian Aviators Eager.

Much interest has been shown in the two Russian aviators who fly at this meet. They are Paul Studensky and Ignace Sem Leboue. They were in Boston and declared that they were eager to make their debut as navigators of the air.

Joe Downey, the Jamaica Plain boy, had his Bleriot ready to take part in the day's program.

Cromwell Dixon, it was announced would use both a biplane and a dirigible balloon during the meet.

A new railroad station has been placed at the field. It is known as the Aeronautic station. Passengers who came by railroad were let off at the entrance. Those coming by trolley alighted at the Aeronautic.

The seating arrangements at the field are somewhat similar to those at Revere. Each patron will have a seat with a back to it.

Late this afternoon President Metz of the meet was in conference with W. Starling Burgess, trying to make arrangements to enter Harry Atwood, the Roxbury aviator.

James V. Martin arrived on the field shortly after Covington. His new Gnome-White baby biplane has been repaired. He tuned up his motor. He found the thrust to be 600 pounds. He said:

"It is a great day. We will give the public all the flying there is in us."

Ovation for Mrs. Martin.

Mrs. Martin received an ovation when she appeared on the field clad in her aviation costume. This includes a short skirt, leather jacket and hood. Her biplane was just recently in its finishing touches in the hangers of the aeronautic station of the field.

Special trains were routed from the North Station to the Aeronautic station. The crowd to-day far exceeded the expectation of President Metz. By trolley and train, in automobiles and on foot the crowds poured through Waltham to the field. No flights were made during the afternoon owing to the high wind.

The field itself is ideal as a place for holding aviation contests. Formerly the private estate of Governor Gore, the first executive of Massachusetts, the tract is one of the most extensive in this vicinity. The polo and golf grounds, every attribute who has visited the aerodrome pronounces it ideal.

GRAY'S 'ELEGY' IN COURT CASE

The Knell of hereditary sway
Is sounding in the air,
And all the kings of all that earth can grasp
Attend with equal fear
The paths of glory lead but to the grave.

Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathomed caves of ocean bear:
Full many a flower is born to blush unseen
And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

The paintings of the Italian masters of the seventeenth century were exhibited as justification for the refusal to grant a license to the Boston Opera House.

And so it was a token that even the painters are willing to do one side of the story, if the supreme judicial court will only say so. Well, the Supreme Judicial Court has said so, and Vesper Briggs, a portrait painted schoolgirl of past centuries, is temporarily vindicated.

Victoria Woodhull, many years old, under cover of a real name in her own right, has her picture in the Sunday papers. Mrs. Lucy Ann Briggs of the Supreme court section of Dighton is a relic of the past.

Girl Tells Her Side.

Mr. Briggs asks the Supreme Court to issue a writ of mandamus to compel the Governor and other members of the Executive Council to furnish him a written statement giving the reasons for refusing Arthur Vesper, Mrs. Briggs's petition for a writ of habeas corpus. She alleges that the child was taken from her illegally and without due process of law.

Mrs. Briggs's petition for a writ of habeas corpus was denied by Justice Sheldon, Dec. 1, 1910. He regarded as unsupported the statement in the petition that the child was happy, well cared for and well fed.

Vesper Briggs is a tall, pale girl of 16, who looked to be much older. She was dressed in a dark blue suit, white shirt waist and no hat. Her hair was in two braids.

"I am the girl," she told the Justice. Miss Mary W. Matheson, a teacher at the Mt. Vernon school, was then called to the witness stand and was asked to identify the girl. Miss Matheson said that she had taught Vesper Briggs for thirty-six months.

Mrs. Briggs's counsel then asked Miss Matheson if she had ever told Vesper that she would be sent to the House of Good Shepherd if she did not behave herself. Miss Matheson said that she had not.

Vesper Briggs was then asked if she had ever been told by Miss Matheson that she would be sent to the House of Good Shepherd if she did not behave herself. The girl said that she had been told that.

Miss Matheson was then asked

THORP RECEIVED BANK STOCK TWO DAYS BEFORE THE DEATH OF MRS. BULL

ALFRED, Me., June 15.—Admission that twenty-one shares in the Charles River National Bank belonging to Mrs Ole Bull were transferred on January 16, two days before her death, to Joseph G. Thorp was made when that important will news was called again today in the hearing on the contest of the will of the widow of the Norwegian violinist.

Mr. Thorp, under the questions of Attorney Sherman L. Whipple, stated that this transfer of stock worth $2,200 had been made to him by himself by virtue of a power of attorney given to him by Mrs. Bull several years ago. The point was brought up during an examination of a list produced in court and supposed to contain an inventory of all the securities held by Mrs. Bull at the time of her death. Questions put by letter to the executors by Mrs. Olea Bull Vaughan in regard to the amount of the estate had been met with the reply that it approximated $300,000, although its actual value is more than $500,000.

Employes to Testify.

Miss Fanny Kester, who was summoned as a cook by Mrs. Bull was in court as a witness. She and other servants of Mrs. Bull are expected to testify as to certain happenings in the Bull household. It is not likely that their testimony will be reached until the session is resumed in Biddeford next week.

Annotations on the list of securities, written in the hand of Mr. Parker, executor with Mr. Thorp, led to the pointed questions asked by Mr. Whipple. Mr. Thorp said in response: "Those shares were transferred to me by Mr. Parker because he thought I wanted to purchase them. That is, he wrote my name on the transfer. Of course, that transfer was made by me under power of attorney from Mrs. Bull.

Q.—That means that the transfer was made from you to yourself? A.—Yes.

Q.—When was it made? A.—January 16.

Q.—When did you discover it? A.—The same day, I think.

Q.—When did you re-transfer these shares to Jackson & Curtis? A.—I can't remember.

Q. What is the value of these shares? A. $200 each.

Q. Did you cause any check to be made out for them or any other payment for them to be made? A.—No.

No Record Was Made.

Q.—At the date of your sister's death this stock stood in your name, without payment having been made to the estate, by virtue of an arrangement between yourself as representative of Mrs Bull and yourself as an individual? A.—Yes.

Q.—On the list of her securities at the time of her death there was no record of these shares in the bank nor of any payment for them? A.—No.

Mr Thorp further admitted that the list he produced of the securities that were taken by him to Rhode Island had been altered and amended, and that there was no record of the shares transferred to the brokers, Jackson & Curtis, which might be used for purposes of verification except another list kept in a book in Mr Thorp's office. Mr Thorp received that a bonding "Estate of Mrs. Sarah C. Bull" had not been put on this list in his office until after the death of his sister.

Mrs. Vaughan's Letter.

Among the new letters introduced by Mr. Whipple to show the straining of relations between Mrs. Bull and her daughter and the mental excitement under which Mrs Bull labored when she was writing of her psychic and faith healing experiments was one from Mrs. Vaughan to her mother dated Nov. 25, 1905. It said in part:

"My Dear Mamma: It is very kind of you to offer me the massage, but I do not feel that I need it. I went to two doctors as you wanted me to, and as they both say that all I need is rest and good food I feel that that ought to be good advice.

"Running after health with the anxiety attending it, does not seem to me to be profitable. I did it before, when you wanted me to try osteopathy, and you see what came of that.

"I do not think it would be possible for me to receive help in Cambridge while you feel as you do. I do not blame you for your high and lofty morals of self-Autonia, but they are nevertheless

Mrs. Swanander on Stand.

Mrs. Edith Swanander testified that she had met Mrs. Bull in New York in 1906, and met her again last September at Greenwich where she went at the special invitation of Mrs. Bull herself.

Q. How did she look? A. She was thin. Her skin was so tight I could hardly recognize her. She wanted me to cook her some Scandinavian dishes.

Q. Did she tell you what was the matter with her? A. She said I am not ill. But fifteen years ago something came into my life that affected the nerves that feed my stomach. I can free myself from this I shall get well. I have struggled hard. My mother told me that she had sent you to me, and that you would make me well. She said that Swami Vivekananda had sent her to her.

Q. Did you know that both the Swami and Mrs. Bull's mother were dead? A.—Yes.

Q. Did she talk to you about seeing visions? A.—Yes. She said that the Swami, Edwina, her granddaughter, and her mother and father had come to her in visions and told her that she would get well.

Q.—Describe her condition. A.—She was weak in mind and body when she came to Brooklyn. But she seemed to improve rapidly after that.

Consulted Star-Gazers.

A new phase of the amazing superstitions held and practiced by Mrs. Bull was presented to the court when a horoscope cast under her direction was discussed. It purported to be the life-scheme of Mrs. Olea Bull Vaughan, the daughter who is fighting for a greater share in the estate.

Concerning the belief in the governance of the stars held by the widow of the world famous Norwegian violinist Miss May Aspes, O'Neill, a friend of her daughter Millicent, N. Y., will tell what she knows in a deposition to be taken in Boston next Wednesday. Miss O'Neill is about to sail for Europe. She is the daughter of Miss Bielski of Sparkill, N. Y., a well known exponent of astrological lore.

INCOMING LINERS REPORT THICK FOG

Seven steamships and a British sailing vessel which arrived in Boston today from foreign ports all report thick fogs during the past week, extending 1,000 miles along the coast and spreading far out to sea. Captain Greiner of the Leyland liner Cambrian, which arrived from London, and Captain Lodge of the Leyland liner Ilerian, from Manchester, say report that for three days they were surrounded in a heavy fog bank within a few miles of each other, and were able to keep in communication only through their whistles.

Well these four men in action [illegible] would make things interesting for the cash and that can take it to the limit.

Wiley and Hoot are well known to the fans of this city as both have been seen in action at the local track.

Ray Duer, the fourth member of the quartet, is a total stranger to the fans of this city and a great deal of interest will be taken in his work as he is said to be one of the best men in the game today and the cash that can take it to the limit.

Duer has been brought from the Coast at great expense in order to step Colin Kennedy's stride. Upon his defeat of Colin depends his chances of securing a race on the National Circuit.

The class B riders will make their first appearance of the season at the local track in [illegible] events. They were to show last week but owing to the race being called off the management decided to give them another chance. Several old-time favorites among the amateur riders will be seen in these two events.

The amateurs will appear in two events and a novel event will bring the meet to a close. The twelve mile final race of its kind that has been pulled off at the Revere track for a good many moons.

WRESTLING BY ROUNDS PLAN

Over in London the promoters of the wrestling game are thinking of having matches decided on the mat by rounds, the same as in boxing. It is planned to have each wrestling round go from five to ten minutes, with a minute of rest. Wrestling matches conducted along these lines, it is argued, will prove an incentive for the men to work harder to secure a fall.

The scheme, however, is lacking, inasmuch as it does not provide for a decision in the event of neither man being able to secure a fall, in amateur wrestling bouts, which are decided with a time limit of fifteen minutes, it is up to the referee to give a decision.

The round system would hardly appeal to the wrestling followers of this section, who want to see the men go to a finish match. The round system would give the smart artists plenty of opportunity to take matches, a feature which the promoters in this country have been a long time trying to overcome.

TRIS SPEAKER BACK IN SOX GAME TO-DAY

By R. W. LARDNER.

The knowledge that Tris Speaker's injury won't keep him out of the frolics at the Huntington avenue grounds for any length of time is cheering, to say the least. The gloom were in the vast majority when Tris hurt himself on that desperate slide to the plate in the fifth inning of yesterday's game, and there wasn't a joy in sight when the red hosed "pail-bearers" carried him to the clubhouse. But the joys subsequently made a successful flank movement, and the tidings were brought forth that Tris's wound was not nearly as severe as was at first feared. It is usually thus in the national pastime.

While Clyde Engle is a sweet hitter and has been known to work brilliantly in the outfield, the Sox don't look like themselves with Speaker out of the line. President Taylor promises that the demon centre fielder will be back in the game to-day. It is to be hoped so, for games won from the Naps count just as much as those taken from any other source, and Tris is certainly a big help in the manufacturing of victories.

Joe Jackson, spoken of as a rival to Ty Cobb, didn't look like a very formidable man yesterday. Still it must be remembered that even Ty has his off days, so Joe may have been one for Joe. He had been hard at combat with blisters on the heel, which are not pleasant possessions, and he just got back into the fray to help the Naps trim us, which they came far from doing. Joe appeared at bat four times and couldn't do anything with the left handed pitching of E. Karger, who had one of his good days, except to make an awkward try for Hooper's long wallop in the first inning, but it is possible he was bothered him. Judgment must be suspended until he has had more of a chance to show Boston why he has the big reputation.

Yerkes Playing Well.

Steve Yerkes's natural position is short stop and he is putting up a game show now that makes the fans forget Heinie Wagner. Heinie is probably glad to be forgotten for awhile, for he pastimed for a few weeks when he felt more like reading a magazine.

At the start of the season when Wagner was out of it before, Steve appeared to be just an ordinary infielder with no prospect of developing into a star. It's different now. He is covering much more ground, swipes to left and to right and does that throwing we were going to acquire field for him. Yerkes isn't a good natural hitter. He just keeps swinging away and doing his best, and his best at present is better than it was when he broke into the big show. However, he is hitting hard and when his hits are needed, and as long as he continues at his present rate of speed Sox fans won't be seeking charity on the ground that the batsman is crippled.

Cy Young Here.

The Bunker Hill Day festivities will be made more attractive by the fact that Cy Young, former Boston hero, will pitch for the visitors in one of the games. This announcement was made this morning by Manager Stovall. Chances are it will work in the morning game, but George will not be able to say until 11 o'clock.

The great old right-hander let loose on the coaching line yesterday and was given a hand that must have done his heart good. He looks exactly the same as he was shining across for the Red Sox and it wouldn't be safe to bet against his remaining in the big league for ten years longer.

Manager George is having all sorts of hard luck. Jackson was out of the game for only a few days, but Larry Lajoie isn't likely to play again this season and some of the Clevelanders go so far as to predict that he will never don the armor again. Larry is now at his country home near Cleveland. He spends most of his time in bed and the doctors have forbid den him to ride around in his big car, which gave him so much pleasure last year.

We have always given "Shrimp" Flynn credit for being a pretty wise little guy, but when he went ahead against our advice and gave "Eagle Beak" Spruder fifteen runs in advance to pitch a series for the Wild Cats, and paid five cents to "Skinny" Shaner for the pitcher's release from the Starfish Giants, he made one of the biggest bonehead plays that has yet been pulled off in the history of organized baseball. Of course just as we expected "Eagle beak" failed to pitch yesterday. He refunded five cents to "Shrimp" Flynn, but that does not wipe out the defeat that the Wild Cats suffered at the hands of Mike Egan to say hello, and whatever "Puggy" Mullane's Wasps. Although the score was not a very decisive one, it being 10 to 8 in the fifth inning when the game was broken up, every little bit counts, and "Puggy" Mullane has something to now about.

We thought there was something doing in "Puggy" Mullane's noodle for the last few days. He has not been around the hall of office even to say hello, and whatever we heard from him indirectly has always been rather a mysterious reference to some surprise he had up his sleeve. The surprise came out yesterday when he sprung the "Great Unknown" on us. This "Great Unknown" is supposed to be the most natural lost pitcher yet discovered. Outside of that we know nothing. "Puggy" says that he is only going to use him in case of dire necessity. If "Eaglebeak" had pitched to our estimation, but he is as good as he ever was. Not that I mean to say protection alot the right policy as regards to converse word, or that a man cold see a sudden great white light once in a while. But Joe cert-ain-ly was contrary. When he got married there was a heap of sympathy slopped on the bride on that account. "She was a gal that had been sort of used of havin' her own way about most everything, so it's a hard habit to get shet of. Joe thought a heap of her, but he allowed he wasn't a-goin to be run by no woman an' the first time she tried it he put his foot down.

"'No, honey,' he says, gentle, but firm 'You cain't have no crarpet for the hall way, so don't you waste no precious words of yourn argyin' the matter. I've done made up my mine about that an' my mine don't run to hall-way crarpets."

She Wanted to Know

"'I'd like to know the reason,' says his wife.

"'I'd shed my heart's blood for you; but crarpet in a hallway's plumb unreasonin', Joe told her, an' he hung right to it.

"Still she wasn't sure an' certain that he was the right kind bound an' so to that she didn't want him to do until about a month later. In that time he'd hired a tramp who advised him not to what she didn't want him to do until about a month later. In that time he'd hired a tramp who advised him not to buy crarpet but a batch of chin-whiskers because she allowed she despised 'em. bought a cettin' of Dominick algo when she wanted Brown Laighorns, bring her home a check dress pattern instid of the stripe she ast him to bring her, quit the Baptist church an' joined the Congregationals, run a wild cucumber vine up the front gallery when she'd sent to the nursery for climbin' roses, an' got blind-staxin', whoopin' drunk.

"'Well,' she says to herself, 'if that's the way of it I've jist nachally got to govern myself accordingly, an' that's all there is to it.' So from that on when she wanted him to do one thing she's ast him to do the other. One time she set her heart on a cottage organ an' she had the agent send him a catalogue, an' when he opened it up she started in.

"'What all nonsense have you got there, Joe Pennyfeather?' she says, peekin' over his shoulder. 'Well, I wonder at you! Organ, of all things!'

A Woman's Way

"'What's the matter with organs?' says Joe, in his obstinit way.

"'I think they're kinda lookin,' an' I don't like the noises they make,' says she I wouldn't have one in my house for a gold mine.'

"'Therefore an therefore he sent off an' got one. You'd think that a woman would be satisfied when she'd got her man's measure down like that, wouldn't you? That jist shows how much you know about women. Mrs. Pennyfeather didn't like it becus she got the name among the neighbors of bein' downtrod. So she does some more studyin', an' the result was that she had her mother down from little Tarkio on a visit, an' one afternoon when Joe was a-lyin' down in the bedroom next the parlor with the door ajar the two of 'em had a confidential talk. They didn't know that Joe was a hearin' with both ears. Hadn't no idee of that. Certnly not. Land sakes! no.

"'I'm a right smart troubled about you, Lavinia,' says the old lady. 'I don't deny that Joseph is a good provider an' a sober, hardwarkin' man; but they tell me that he keeps you right under his thumb an' has his own way about ever'thin, an' that hain't right.'

Poor Old Joe

"'Mrs. Pennyfeather busts out laffin', with her handkerchief over her mouth. 'Mother,' she says at last, 'I reckon I've got to tell you, but you've got to promise not to tell a livin' soul. Joe's a good man, sure enough, an' he's smart in most things, but I've fooled him right along. I didn't been married to him a day afore I found out that he was plump contrary, so I jest set to work to get my own way my lettin' on that I wasn't.

"'I wanted lie-cloth for the hall-way, so I made out I was powerful set on crarpet; I wanted Dominick chicks the worst way, so I argyed for Brown Laighorns an' got my Dominick settin.' If there's one thing I like more'n another, it's a man with whiskers. I don't think he looks like a man without 'em, so I pertended they was pleasy to me an' dear Joe quit shavin' from that on. It's been that-a way right along, 'ceptin' once or twice I forgot, like when he got that pesky organ. I jest let him have his own way an' manage Mr. Joseph. I spose he'd be turrible mad if he knew how I do it.'

"'Well, trouble-mers,' concluded Hancock, 'I couldn't undertake to say whether Joe was mad or not, but I do know that next mornin' he strapped up his razor an' shaved off his fine beard an' went down to the kitchen where his wife was a-gettin' breakfast and told her he reckoned crarpet would look better in the hall-way after all."

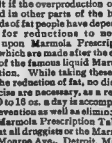
DANGERS OF FAT

HOW FAT AFFECTS THE BRAIN



Just how fat affects and finally destroys the brain, is not exactly known; however, degeneration, and final collapse of the brain tissue, due to this cause, is of frequent occurrence. Head pains, and head heavinoss, which are often experienced by fat people, may indicate that this degenerating process is imminent. The return of the fatty tissue to normal brain substance, may and probably will result if the overproduction of fat is stopped in other parts of the body. Thousands of fat people have depended entirely for reductions to normal weight, upon Marmola Prescription Tablets, which are made after the exact formula of the famous liquid Marmola Prescription. While taking these tablets for the reduction of fat, no dieting nor exercise are necessary, as a reduction of 10 to 15 oz. a day is accomplished by prevention as well as elimination of fat. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold at all druggists or the Marmola Co., 74 Monroe Ave., Detroit, Mich., at the uniform price of 75c for a large case. They remove the fat already formed, prevent its reforming, clear the complexion and tone up the entire system.

Women of India Await Their Uplifting

The Orient Is More in Need of America To-day Than America Is of the Orient

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1911, by the International News Service

BABA BHERATI, at the studio of Edmond Russell, recently gave an interesting discourse on the meaning of Life, Love and Religion.

He said many beautiful and true things. He made just criticisms of those Americans who seem to consider money the object of life, and those women who smother their real selves under layers of silk and fine linen, and who live only to dress.

But the brilliant Oriental teacher was somewhat sweeping in his assertions. He left his hearers with the impression that all men of wealth and all women of elegance, in America lacked spiritual development and high aspirations. He urged us to look at the Orient, the oldest land on earth and the cradle of all religions, for spiritual ideals. He spoke of the women of India a great, holy and noble examples of womanhood

Knows Conditions in India

Baba Bherati and all his predecessors in America have given utterances many times to similar expressions. It has frequently been my privilege to know something of the conditions existing in India, both in society and in homes. I felt called upon to reply to Baba Bherati, who is an erudite and earnest man with one great aim—to help his fellow beings. In my reply to him, I stated the following facts:

In all my experience in smart and fashionable functions, in Europe or America, I never saw such magnificence of attire, and so many rare jewels displayed in a night, as I saw in Calcutta, India, at an afternoon "purdan party," where I met one hundred and fifty high-class Indian ladies.

The greater number were women wholly unashamed by Western or Christian ideas, as if it was just to suppose that they were by nature and custom as fond of dress and adornment as we are; even more so, since added to eyes, fingers and wrists, noses, lips and ankles were often adorned with exquisite gems. The Indian woman is unquestionably more religious, and more modest than European or American women, but the religion which she practises to-day, with her unselfishness, is of a nature which inevitably produces selfishness in the masculine sex.

Religious, but Had Three Wives

I spent an hour in the home of a great Maharajah, to whom Baba Bherati gave me a letter. The host was a profound scholar, deeply religious in thought and giving regular time to prayers and meditation. His conversation was delightful, yet in his palace he kept three wives, living in strict purdah, which means seclusion, and nor given the advantages of association with the world. These women are really happier than a great many American wives, because they are educated to believe that woman's entire sphere in life consists in doing everything possible to please her husband, to make him comfortable, to bear his children and to live in seclusion, unseen and unknown by other men, and never criticising or rebuking him, no matter what he does, and never thinking of herself as his equal, or his companion.

This is what I was told by one of India's most gifted women, who has come out of seclusion.

No race can rise to its highest development where women are permitted to hold such ideas of life and duty.

I visited another home where I met the one wife and two beautiful daughters-in-law of a millionaire, high caste Brahman in base seldom see? my privilege to meet a more interesting and widely educated man, yet the women of his household were not educated, and they live in strict seclusion.

Few Women Read or Write

An Indian woman of genius, one of the emancipated, told me that only one woman in 100, in India, could read or write. The latest enquiries of the British government report the same fact. An Indian woman author writes that man in India regard woman only with reverence or affection when she is a breeder of the species. The childless woman receives no respect and is taught not to respect herself, she is a failure in the scheme of the universe.

I cannot feel that a country which holds this idea of woman, which allows child marriages, and enforced widowhood, and encourages caste prejudice should be held up as an ideal for America to-day. know that the greatest mental and spiritual uplift ever given America by any one individual came through Swami Vidakananda. I know that from the old Vedas of ancient India came all the religion that the world has known. Christ was an Oriental, and unquestionably studied in India between his twelfth and thirtieth year. Not only are all the religious contained in the Vedas, but they contain also allegorical references to electricity, radium and even airships.

Masses Sunk in Ignorance

But to-day that wonderful old religion in its perfection and purity is known and understood only by the few in India. The masses are sunk in ignorance and superstition, unbelievable until one has seen. India to-day is in greater need of having its own true philosophy taught to its people than any other land.

America has its serious faults; great dangers menace it; but American mothers are not all grown, money mad, or material minded men. We have altruistic, unselfish, humanity-loving and God inspired men among our wealthy people. We have glorious women, with angelic loving hearts beating under their jeweled, silked clad breasts.

America and India need one another, but to-day I feel that India needs America more than America needs India.

Indian women need to find their real value, even if in finding it they become restless and dissatisfied—for often through restlessness and dissatisfaction comes growth of the individual and the race.

Leghorns

V. H. OLMSTEAD, the statistician of the Department of Agriculture, said the other day in Washington, apropos of certain crop statistics:

"I deem them wrong as absolutely wrong as little Willie's remark on chickens.

"Little Willie was taken out into the country on a bright Spring day. As he played with his sister in the farmyard, a group of Leghorn chickens approached, led by a Leghorn rooster.

"'Willie,' said the little girl, 'why are those chickens called Leghorn?'

"'Look at their ankles,' Willie replied. 'Don't you see the little horns on them?'

RATHER EMBARRASSING

The two men talked for a time on the train.

"Are you going to hear Barkins lecture to-night?" said one.

"Yes," replied the other.

"Take my advice and don't. I hear he is an awful bore."

"I must go," said the other. "I'm Barkins."

FORCE OF HABIT

"Well, you got your husband to go to church with you instead of the theatre, eh?

"Yes, but he disagreed me. The pastor read four chapters from Acts, and he insisted on going out between 'em."

When the Wind Is Calling

WHEN the wind comes wuthering, I am wild
to go;
Where the wind wild wuthering, I am wild
to know,
Out across the moorland or through the murky town;
But when the wind is waking, I cannot lie down.

Clouds are rushing over, tall-towering, fast,
They take me up and wrap me in their mantles
from the blast.
The dark water glimmers with a drowned star
below,
And where the clouds will bear me I care not as they go.

In tall sky cathedrals with the moon for altar light,
Where deep like an organ the sea sings out of sight,
Through dusky cloud-cloisters where a Presence
walks unseen,
When the wind wakes and wuthers, often have I been.

Shut who will their windows, and let their lamps
be lit,
Warm and cheery be they as by the fire they sit;
But the wind and the moonlight are awake about the town,
And when the wind is calling I cannot lie down.

A Successful Wife

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT
By G. DORAET

BUT I knew that my husband wouldn't budge if I didn't, and he needed the vacation terribly. It was perfectly killing the way he took me for granted, just as people take the earth or the sky.

It was a queer trip.

I might as well have gone alone. But it gave me a chance to see the country and the West. My husband seemed on his honeymoon with Fanny, and I used to get perfectly wild—wild for her! She was really in love with him in a way, but he never so much as referred to Fanny in any way.

As soon as the doors of our room were shut he appeared to forget her, and all his interests were centered in the legal affairs he had left behind. He was receiving letters from Judge Hollins, of Senator Roxburg, and while we were in Denver some one wired him to ask him to take a case, which he told me, if he accepted, would bring him fifteen thousand dollars.

I was watching Fanny like a hawk, and stuck on everywhere they went. My husband didn't know or care, but Fanny was blue and sullen when I was around. He teased her and joked her and made love to her under my very eyes.

And I couldn't but feel that he would just as soon kiss her before me, for he was as unconscious of my presence as one is of the earth and the air; just like the earth and air, I kept there!—under his feet . . . ? Well, I didn't feel it so. Most of the time I had a solemn, frightened feeling; it was growing serious as far as my sister was concerned.

Neither one of them could shake me, and when I saw that the only person I made mad by staying around was Fanny I pitied her.

Nobody could be as pretty as Fanny and be safe with a man, and when I was taken with one of my violent heads on the day of one of our excursions at Colorado Springs, I felt that Fate had overtaken her.

Fanny couldn't disguise her feelings. She was delighted that I was laid up, and before they started she came in to see how I was.

"Fanny," I said, "in my top drawer is a little packet. Will you hand it to me?"

She did as I asked, and then I gave it to her.

"There," I said; "the girl found them out in the front yard—you must have dropped them. I haven't had a chance to give them to you before. I don't need to tell you that I have not read them, but I do burn them if I were you."

She snatched them from me—half a dozen letters from my husband to her, addressed to Fanny at the post-office in Breckenteville, "to be called for." She was flaming red when she went out of the room—without making a remark.

They started away on their all-day trip, and I was nearly out of my mind about it. I couldn't speak to my husband. I knew that he would have flown into a passion and have denied that he cared whether Fanny lived or died, and that, ten to one, after a scene with me, he might have taken something to drink.

A Memory

Fanny had on a blue serge skirt that day, a blue shirtwaist, and a sailor with a blue ribbon around it. She looked eighteen years old, and no more, and her skin gleamed like pearl.

It was not until they had been gone several hours that, like a flash, Miss Page came over my dull, heavy mind—came like a mist—like a ghost from another world.

I could see the picture of her bent and tragic face as I hadn't thought of her for a long time, and now I remembered how I had kissed her like a sister; and I decided that I had been mean and cruel to my own sister, and very weak altogether.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon I dressed, sick as I felt, put on my hat, and then a fainting sense came over me, and as I had often done before, there came the certainty that I was unequal to my task, and couldn't stem the tide of life that went so fast around me.

By the time I got down stairs I was tripping set with perspiration, but started out to walk down the road which I knew they would be likely to take coming back, and it was as if Millie Page went along by my side—white and breezy, and after I had taken some dozen steps in the road I stood still where I was and prayed.

Then I returned to the hotel, and sat down on the piazza and waited.

About supper-time they drove up in a hotel carriage both of them sitting back to back and speaking to each other.

When they drove up Fanny said she was tired and hot, and she looked cross as anything and went upstairs. But Fanny's face was bright and as gay as a bird. He said:

"I have been impressed, absorbed, interested, absorbed, by the beauty of this country. The clarity of the atmosphere—it's like wine. Still, I don't feel that it is my natural element. Can't we get a little higher? I want to be sure Colorado."

He took his hat off, and told me about the ranches they had visited. He asked me if my head was better, and said he was sorry I hadn't been along.

Here one of the clerks came out and the man departed, and he went in, and I was certain by the way he had acted that we had passed a crisis right here in Colorado Springs, and I would have given a five-dollar bill to have seen how Fanny and my husband had spent that day together—especially after his talk to me up in our rooms that night.

Bored by Fanny

I some letters for him for his first evening, and it was late before we sat them down-stairs.

"Luther," he exclaimed, "my dear girl, I don't want to hurt your feelings, but I am bored—bored to extinction by your sister! I am sorry to be rude, my dear, but another afternoon like this would give me softening of the brain!"

He was petulant at me with his greatest charm, and suggested, like a little boy who is asking a favor.

"Couldn't you arrange to send Fanny home? Couldn't you, my dear girl? It's like going to market to go out with her for eight hours on a stretch, and I feel as though I had carried all the vegetables home."

And still smiling at me, he waited, eagerly, for me to help him out.

"Let's all go back to Brackettsville to-morrow, Stephen."

"No, no. I'm ent to explore, and I'm not going to run pale at the first variation of the chart. I have interests in Oretown, Nevada, for Judge Rollins, and you and I will go on to-morrow and send Fanny back."

But I told him that we couldn't do any thing of that kind, that she was with us as our guest, that she was going to stay with us right along, and that when he had finished his business in Nevada we would go back together.

He gave up rather hummy, and said: "All right, my dear, only remember that I married you and not your family."

And I told him that we were narrowing down fast.

"Well, don't get any more headaches on our all-day excursions."

DR. W. W. KEEN, the noted Philadelphia surgeon, at a dinner, praised the results of animal research.

"Animal research," he said, "has given us serum therapy and countless other blessings. Drugs, in modern healing art, are retiring further and further into the background.

"And this is just as well, too, for what the old German practitioner once said of himself used to be true of many a doctor.

While Claude is helping the cowboys capture the monster boa constrictor, Desperate Desmond takes advantage of the opportunity to carry Rosamond away. He wouldn't dare do this if one hero were looking, for, like all villains, he is an arrant coward at heart, though brave as a lion when no danger is near.

Desmond takes our fair heroine back to the now deserted circus tent and puts her in one compartment of a double cage, the other half of which is occupied by a ferocious maneating tiger. Upon Rosamond's refusal to be his bride the villain opens the connecting door, so that the tiger can go through and tear the dear girl to pieces.

Let us step aside for a moment from this affecting scene and look at Ivan Haus, the trained elephant, who is trying to master the difficult art of juggling a ball in the air with his feet and trunk. He has been practising this stunt for weeks and weeks, and is going to keep at it until his efforts are crowned with success.

It is very annoying when you are trying to concentrate your whole attention on something of the most vital importance to you to have some rank outsider butt in as the boa constrictor is doing now. But you can hardly blame the snake either. He is merely trying to escape from his pursuers.

The snake disturbed the elephant so much that he kicked the ball way up in the air, and, fortunately for Rosamond, it has put Desmond and Gonigata in a cage and is taking them away to the place of execution, wherever that is. How to Win Success

From School to Business—The Way Some Men Seize Opportunity

By THOMAS TAPPER

I.

SCHOOL is the beginning of business, and business is the greatest school in the world. Education begins with the child's first crying gasp at the atmosphere into which it is born, and it goes on to the last act of life.

The young man or woman who leaves school for business is still the same individual. The change consists only in taking up one set of tasks for another. The work that calls out the power has changed, but the call to the power itself is clear and distinct.

Business is an elastic word. It applies to the work for which a man receives pay from some source outside of himself, payment for the use of energy which is aroused within himself. In the broadest sense, then, the word business may refer to the laborer who gives what seems to be only physical strength, and to the financier or scholar, who gives mental power. In either case the reward is for power set in motion.

It has been polluted out by Mr. Arnold Bennett that, in the popular sense of the word, it is impossible for all men to succeed. This is not an indictment against the word Success, but against our use of it.

Every human being can succeed in the one patch that is open to him. That is, he can succeed in letting himself out, if he will, which means, if he "wills it."

"What I am," said Sir Humphrey Davy, "I have made myself."

In every man there is something which can be increased, something that lets out the real man and gives him another chance to show what is in him. It may mean only a good foot soldier instead of a general; it may mean a humble schoolmaster, and not a Pestalozzi; it again may mean a man wise in the ways of family government, and not at all wise in national government.

But there is need of all these kinds of men, and each in relation to the man concerned spells success, for success is like life itself. A mouse is just as much alive as an elephant, despite the differences in their bulks.

Real success is that which is developed by business, or by a man's daily work. It may be, on the other hand, the simple task of digging a ditch, or, on the other, the guiding of a national crisis. Some measure of a man is called out in both cases, and a man can win success at either task.

II.

Now, if we use this word business as meaning a man's daily labor, it is a great word, and it shows clearly the direction where success comes.

A man at work is not a slave. He is a free man. He serves the world, and his presence among other men is that of one bearing a part of the load. By his help the work of the world moves forward.

This applies as much to a boy running an elevator as it does to a man who carries on a large business. And the comfort it has for the boy in the elevator is this: When he has learned how to do his work in the very best way he is ready to move on to a better place. After all, it is not easy to run an elevator in the best way.

III.

School is so arranged that we move on from class to class. As we advance we know we are making good. We do our lessons as they are given us, and the teacher keeps a record of how we do them. If the record shows up to his satisfaction he puts a check mark against our name to say that we are passed on.

The advantage of this is that some one, man or woman, is taking the trouble to find out how we get our advancement when we are ready for it. No one ever gets our place. Our record belongs to us, and we stand or fall on the work we do.

Business, like school, is arranged so that we can go on from class to class. Now if we actually KEEP ON MOVING, if we keep on making a good record, some one will take note of it and give us credit for it; or, if no such person is watching us, our record will, of itself, push us into a better place.

Many people do not believe this, but it is true. No one can trust anything with more faith than he can trust good work.

When a man stops getting on in life something is wrong. Either he has done his work only passably well, or, having mastered it, he is content to stay where he is.

In this respect men at work are like boys in the old swimming hole. They can usually swim forward with a good strong stroke or they can just tread water. Now the business world is so full of men treading water that they often get in the way of the swimmer who wants to get somewhere.

When David Garrick tramped to London with Sam Johnson he had no money in his pocket. But he had something better, which was A THOUGHT IN HIS MIND. This thought kept urging him to become an actor. And he kept at it until he succeeded.

Garrick went into business on the basis of a partnership. He was one partner and his sagacious wife the other. A combination of this kind cannot be beaten, unless the man himself is untrue to the other partner.

You have often heard about Opportunity knocking at a man's door. Some men wait just behind the door, listening for Opportunity to come along. When it raises its hand to knock the man rushes out and says:

"All ready, Mr. Opportunity. I am ready. Show me what to do."

But other men—and a lot of them—are not just behind the door. They are in bed. When Opportunity knocks, they turn over and sing out:

"Not so much noise. I'm resting."

And it is a truth worth remembering that when a man wants to rest, Mr. Opportunity always turns away from the door and lets him have all the rest he wants.

To-day's Best Story

BOOTH TARKINGTON was talking in Indianapolis about the stage.

"There were two actresses in an early play of mine," he said, "both very beautiful; but the leading actress was thin. She quarreled one day at rehearsal with the other lady, and she ended the quarrel by saying, haughtily:

"'Remember, please, that I am the star.'

"'Yes, I know you're the star,' the other retorted, eyeing with an amused smile the leading actress's long, slim figure, 'but you'd look better, my dear, if you were a little meteor.'"

A Thoughtful Juror

"IN one benighted region of a certain State in the Southwest," says a lawyer "they observe some peculiar notions touching the duties of a juror. One day a case was being tried, when suddenly the Justice exclaimed:

"'How is this? There are only eleven jurymen in the box. Where is the twelfth?'

"The foreman rose and addressed the court respectfully as follows: 'May it please your honor, the twelfth juror had to go away on important business, but he has left his verdict with me.'"

TO'DAY'S INSTALMENT

BUT the instinct of duty soon came upon me. He had seen his colleague bury something in the grave, and the briefest search brought to light the daggers in their cardboard coffin.

Even in that overwhelming gloom of night and shivering yews no recognized one of the weapons. A green broke from him, as it were, in protest.

"Mad!" he sighed, "stark, staring mad to leave this here, where he knew I must find it. My poor Furneaux! Perhaps that is best. I must defer action for a few hours, if only to give him a last chance."

While the Chief Inspector was stumbling to the gate of the cemetery—which was long since closed to all except those who could show an official permit—one of his subordinates was viewing the Feldsham Mansions crime in a far different light. Inspector Clarke, in whom clation at his discovery was chastened by chagrin at Winter's loss, was walking towards Scotland Yard and saying to himself:

"I can prove, anyhow, that I took the rotten things from his trunk. So now, Monsieur Janoc, the next and main item is to arrest you!"

Osborne Makes a Vow

When Inspector Winter returned to his office from the cemetery he sat it his desk, gazing at the two daggers before him, and awaiting the coming of Clarke, from whom he expected to receive a full report of an interview with Pauline Janoc in connection with the disappearance of Rosalind.

There he that long sought-for Saracen dagger at last; and Furneaux had it, had been caught burying it in the grave of her who had been killed by it.

Was not this fact, added to the fact that Furneaux was seen in Osborne's museum before the murder—was it not enough to justify—indeed, enough to demand—Furneaux's arrest straight away? And Furneaux had visited Rose De Bercy that night—had been seen by Bertha Seward, the actress' cook! And yet Winter hesitated. . . . What had been Furneaux's motive?

There was as yet no ray of light as to that, though Winter had caused elaborate inquiries to be made in Jersey as to Furneaux's earlier career there. And there were two daggers buried, not one.

"Where does this come in, this second dagger . . .?" wondered Winter, a man of doubt and horror clouding his brain.

Just then Clarke arrived, rather breathless, jubilant, excited, but Winter had already hidden the daggers hurriedly—throwing them into a drawer of his writing-desk.

"Well, what news of Miss Marsh?" he asked, with a semblance of official calm he was far from feeling.

"The fact is, sir, I haven't been to Pauline Des——"

"What!"

"I was nearly at her door when I came across Gaston Janoc——"

"Oh, Heaven!" muttered Winter in despair. "You and your eternal Janocs——"

The smiling Clarke looked at his chief in full confidence that he would not be reprimanded for having disobeyed orders. Prudently making three steps on tiptoe, he said in Winter's ear:

"Don't be too startled—here's an amazing piece of information for you, sir—it was Gaston Janoc who committed the Feldsham Mansions murder!"

Winter stared at him without real comprehension. "Gaston Janoc!" his lips repeated.

"I want to apply to-morrow for a warrant for his arrest," crowed Clarke.

"But, man alive!—dont' drive me distracted," cried out Winter; "what are you talking about?"

Not On Impulse.

"Why, I am not acting on any impulse, said Clarke, decidedly satisfied, firthoued on facts; "I may tell you now that I have been working on the Feldsham Mansions affair from the first on my own account.

"I couldn't help it. I was drawn to it as a moth by a magnet, and I now have all the threads—my distinct proofs—in my hands. It was Gaston Janoc did it! Just listen to this, sir——"

"Oh, do as you like about your wretched Anarchist, Clarke," said Winter, pestered, waving him away; "I can't stop now. I sent you to do something, and you should have done it. Miss Marsh's mother is half dead with fright and grief, the thing is pressing, and I'll go myself."

With a snatch at his hat, he rushed out, Clarke following sullenly to go home, though on his way northward, by sheer force of habit, he strolled through Soho, looked up at Janoc's windows, and presently, catching sight of Janoc himself coming out of the restaurant on the ground floor, nodded after him, muttering to himself: "Soon now——" and went off.

But had he shadowed his Janoc then, it might have been well! The Frenchman first went into a French shop labeled "Vins et Comestibles," where he bought slices of sausage and a bottle of cheap wine, from which he got the cork drawn —he already carried half a loaf of bread wrapped in paper, and with bread, sausage, and wine, bent his way through spitting rain and high wind, his coat collar turned up round his neck, to a house in Poland street.

An unoccupied house; its window glass thicker than itself with grime; broken in some of the panes, while in others were roughly daubed the words: "To Let." Under the pavement a key was to, picked up a candlestick in the passage, and lit the candle-end it contained.

At the end of the passage he went down a narrow staircase of wood, then down some stone steps, to the door of a back cellar, and this, too, he opened with a key.

Crouching in Corner.

Rosalind was crouching on the floor in the corner furthest from the door, her head bent down, her feet tucked under her skirt. She had been asleep; for the air in there was very heavy, the cellar hardly twelve feet square, no windows, and the slightest movement roused a cloud of dust.

The walls were of rough stone, without break or feature, save three little vaulted caves like ovens in the wall facing the door, unable to contain wine bottles and small barrels; in fact, one barrel and several empty bottles now lay about in the dust.

Besides, there were sardine tins and a tin of mortadel, and relics of sausage and bread, with which Janoc had lately supplied his prisoner, with a bottle half full of wine, and one of water; at showing very dimly in the feeble rays of the candle.

She looked at him, without moving, just raising her scornful eyes and no more, and he, holding up the light, looked at her a good time.

"Lady," he said at last, "I have brought you some meat, wine and bread."

She made no answer. He stepped forward, and laid them by her side; then walked back to the door, as if to go out, coughing at the dust; but stopped and leant his back on the wall near the door, his legs crossed, looking down at her.

"Lady," he said presently, "you still remain fixed in your obstinacy?"

No answer; only her wide-open reproving eyes dwelt on him with their steady accusation like a conscience, and her hand stuck and stuck and stuck time with a hat-pin her hat which lay on her lap.

Her gown appeared to be very frowsy and unkempt now; her hair was untidy, and quite gray with dust on one side, her face was begrimed and stained with the tracks of tears; but her lips were firm, and the wonderful eyes, chiding, disdainful, gave no sign of a drooping spirit.

"You will say nothing to me?" asked Janoc.

He answer.

"Is it that you think I may relent and let you free, lady, because my heart weakens at your suffering? Its not imagine such a thing of me! The more you are beautiful, the more you are sublime in your torture, the more I adore you, the more my heart pours out tears of blood for you, the more I am inflexible in my will.

"You do not know me. I am a man. I have set a thing in mind, not an emotion. Oh pity is strong in me, love is strong, but what is strongest of all is self-admiration, my worship of intelligence. And that I shall unduly impossible that you should be let free without conditions by my confession to you that it was my sister Pauline who killed the actress?

"I tell you again it was Pauline who killed her. It was not a murder! It was an assassination—a political assassination. Mademoiselle de Bercy had proved a traitress to the group of Internationals to which she belonged; she was condemned to death; the lot fell upon Pauline to execute the sentence, and on the day appointed she executed it, having first stolen from Mr. Osborne the 'cello and the dagger, so as to cast the suspicion upon him.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Pretty Ways of Decorating the Table

THERE are fashions in table decorations as in everything else, just now grouped vases are in favor. While these were introduced last season, there are interesting changes.

Instead of the smaller vases for the basket of the table connected with the large central one by long chains, it is newer to have the set more closely grouped, so as to stand on the centre cloth or glass plaque.

One handsome set has a tall central vase of cut silver with four small matchlike vases joined to it by curved openwork guards.

Another new set has a larger glass basket overlaid with silver filigree, four small glass chains are made artistic with glass vases than the china ones, or pretty effects can be had with chains of crystal beads.

These combination flower holders are charming for Summer cottages in white Dresden or delicate blue and white Canton china, each item connected by a low fenceille arrangement in the same ware. One in Greek design had all the lamps shaped like a Doric column, with the tops of the lamps like capitals.

Very new and artistic, with correspondingly costly detail, is a small floral arrangement for the centre of the table. It has a mirror about three inches square, framed in gold with a narrow silver rim. This holds in the middle of it a vase of rock crystal, supplied with a wire netting for keeping the flowers erect.

Around the edge of the mirror are semi-circular sections to hold short-stemmed flowers, the tallest, which may be set in each section. At the sides, filling in the intervening spaces, are two other low sections rectangular in shape. Wonderful floral combinations can be arranged in these.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

Her Ma Has Her Own Ideas About Bringing Children up "Right"

PARENTS of only one or two children assume a superior air when in the presence of parents of large broods. "We have only one or two," their manner implies, "but we are bringing them up RIGHT!"

By this capitalized word "RIGHT" they mean, if one may judge from the outward evidence, that they put more trimming on the clothes of the child and more feeling into its stomach. It is molded till its little insides and disposition are spoiled, and, if anything were left undone that contributes toward making it selfish, it is because the child didn't ask for it.

Bringing Up a Child "Right"

Another proof of bringing a child up "RIGHT" is that its photograph is taken every new moon. The parents begin when the baby is propped up on a pillow with its face so new it hasn't as much expression as a batch of biscuit dough.

In a brief time they fancy that the still which divides its countenance is twisted into a smile and visit a photographer that he may get out a toy hummingbird, or a rattle, or some semblance of a confection line to bring that smile to the baby's face and catch it for all coming big to see.

As the baby grows fatter, a picture is taken, showing it wearing nothing but a waistband, and this also is expected to grace the parlor mantels and tables of kin all over the country.

It is taken to a photographer with its first short dress and its first tooth, and again when it can stand alone, and so on all through life, till, if the kin kept Only Child photographs on display, it would be necessary to enlarge the house.

Mrs. Lysander John Appleton, being the mother of only two children, brought them up "RIGHT." She has photographs of Daysey Mayme and Chauncey Depew in every stage of dress and development. "They can never say I neglected to have little pictures taken," said Mrs. Appleton every time the photographer sent a bill.

The Family Album

But not all the bills were pictures of the children. Mrs Appleton also went of ten, first as a Madonna when her babies were little, wearing a lace curtain or a piano scarf over her head, and holding a baby in her lap, and in later years she appeared alone.

And this explains it. When Lysander John Appleton was elected to the office of ? coroner in his home town his wife was ready with a photograph for the newspapers, to appear in conjunction with a story of how her shattering courage and sympathy made him the great man that he was.

And, as he climbed higher in office she had more pictures taken, cutting her dress lower in the neck for each promotion.

"I trouble to think of how that woman would have dressed to show that she 'realized' if I had been elected governor!" said Lysander John, showing the collecting of family pictures to his pillow cushion ladies one evening.

Too Much for Her

"I'LL claim to be a great clairvoyant," began the client who had been shown into the rooms of Mme La Faque. "I am told that you can read the past, present and future. Nothing is hidden from you."

"It is true," answered the famous medium. "For $2 I will tell you——"

"I will give you $50 if you will put me wise to one problem," interrupted the client impatiently. "What was it that my wife told me to bring home for dinner to-night?"

The money was refunded, but not cheerfully, as the advertisements promised.

SOMETHING TO PRACTICE ON

"Mrs. Green," she said sweetly to her neighbor, at the same time handing a much used dining room rug over the fence, "oh Mrs. Green, I wish you'd take this home and try it on your vacuum cleaner."

CAPT. DALY IN A BANKRUPT

Captain Harvey C. Daly of East Boston has gone into voluntary bankruptcy, with liabilities amounting to $5000 and no assets. The captain, who still retains present occupation as a fish buyer, states in his petition that he is liable as surety to John Trainer of Bath, Me., for $4000 on the estate of the schooner Freddie W. Adams, by the government at Pensacola, Fla., in 1905. The schooner was confiscated by the government in consequence of the conspiracy to smuggle Chinese in it from Mexico into the United States. That liability was contracted, the captain states, while he was a partner with Philip M. Springer and Frederick H. Lord.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

COPPER STOCK GROUP STRONG

NEW YORK, June 15. The copper group and Canadian Pacific were features of strength in the stock market at the opening to-day with large advances. The whole list was steady and the initial prices were generally higher than last night's close. Amalgamated Copper was up 3/4, American Smelting & Refining had a gain of a full point, while Canadian Pacific's advance was 1%.

The pressure which has been exerted against the market seemed to be lifted, at least for a time, and a strong tone prevailed. Steel was another of the strong features at the opening showing a gain of 3/8.

Interest in crop conditions is keen and the continued lack of rain in the northwestern belt continued a factor.

The following advices were scored at the opening of the market: Union Pacific, Southern Railway pf., Pennsylvania 3/8, Reading 1/2, Baltimore & Ohio 1/4, Steel and Brooklyn Rapid Transit 1/8. Atchison was unchanged. Erie was off 1/8 in both common and pf.

The curb market opened firm. Standard Oil and American Tobacco were unchanged. Americans in London were firm, especial strength being displayed by United States Steel.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Stock Exchange houses have begun to send out notices that their branch offices at holiday resorts are about to begin business.

The immediate future of the stock market depends more upon rains than upon steel orders, for if it rains the orders will take care of themselves. Lack of rain for a few days longer will check the advance of the stock market.

It is impossible for any human being to tell whether the stock market is going to advance, stand still or decline for the next two weeks. Much more than usual depends absolutely upon the weather. The only advantage the bull side has over the bears just now is the experience of many years in which rain has always followed a dry spell.

Among the important banking interests a rumor is in circulation that the dividend on Reading common stock will be increased to 8 per cent. at the next declaration. This rumor is not believed but in the company's earnings are large and its concealed assets of vast proportions, the rumor is very generally believed. Another story is a repetition of the report that the Interstate Commerce Commission had decided to order a reduction of 15 cents a ton in the rate on anthracite coal.

The large sums of money for which there has been no borrowing demand have induced National banks to buy more securities than usual. This condition is partly responsible for the excellent market for short term notes which has been in evidence recently. These notes return a higher rate of interest than long-term issues and help the banks to make money on deposit with them earn its keep until it again becomes in demand. Four of the principal national banks in New York city reported bonds, securities, etc., on hand as of May 6 due to the amount of $159,164,554, as against $127,728,084 on March 7, an increase of $27,435,570. On June 10, 1910, the total securities held by these institutions amounted to $103,846,000, showing an increase of $46,317,654 in less than a year.

A most welcome dividend notice would be all stocks selling at politics. The old idea that squandering of money on common dividends increases the value of the preferred stock and bonds is dying out. Forcing the new system of government control the more money a corporation has in its treasury the more its securities will be worth.

This principle is responsible for the advance in American Beet Sugar, which will not pay any dividend on its common stock until next February at the very earliest, but the stock is being well purchased. The money is in the treasury, and the stock holders are fairly certain of getting it some day. There is no longer any danger of directors paying private dividends to themselves. The balance of trade is still greatly in favor of the United States, the credit balance being more than half a billion dollars for eleven months. This, added to the other reasons for buying stocks, has strengthened the hands of the bull campaigners materially.

Strength of Steel is due very largely to reports of large orders placed for material and large orders about to be sent in. Official organs of the steel trust announced that the worst had been seen and that from now on the trade would constantly improve. Buying of Steel stock in large quantities was traced to a house that usually acts for persons identified with the corporation. The short interest in Steel is still very large. With the stock nearly at the recent high record price, its technical position is very strong.

The Rockefeller outfit is still despondent about the future of the country. Prominent members of the Standard Oil party are express as to the probability of it raining any more in Kansas, Missouri or in the western part of the cotton belt. It did rain liberally over Oklahoma and some parts of this great section, but very much more rain is seriously needed.

Practical certainty that the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company will pass or greatly reduce the dividend on the common stock and had a favorable effect on the preferred stock. The company's passing of the common dividend, of course, indicates very certainly that the preferred dividend will be continued.

Suspension of the dividend on Denver preferred caused some good investment buying by the Denver & Western Pacific 5 per cent bonds, which are selling around 92. There is no longer any doubt about the interest on these bonds being paid, and they are among the few bargains left in the Street.

As the madly rushing ambulance bore the sold out bear to the psychopathic ward the word was heard from it repeatedly daffy: "If Congressman Stanley can't hurt the steel trust can David Lamar?" He's in again.—N. Y. Sun.

It is estimated that the Butte mines are producing copper at a cost lower than ever before in their history. On a basis of 12¾c copper the Anaconda company has a production of 165,000,000 pounds a year, according to the rate of earnings, or $21,000,000 a year. With every one cent increase in the price of copper $2,650,000 a year is added to earnings.

LAWSON HAD 2 BROKEN RIBS

For the first time since the autopsy on the body of George H. Lawson of Lynn, who died in the Westboro Insane Hospital last March, it became known at a hearing in the House in an argument in favor of the "restraint" bill that the autopsy was performed by Medical Examiner Timothy Leary of Boston and that he found two broken ribs. At the time of the investigation of Lawson's death the police carefully guarded any information as to who performed the autopsy or what was revealed.

Tales of brutality to patients were rehearsed as arguments in favor of the bill by those who favored it when it came up. The hospital authorities gave out statements, published at that time, that Lawson died of natural causes and had not been beaten.

The body was taken from the hospital to the undertaking rooms of J. L. Bryant at Lynn. Three Lynn physicians said they were called on the telephone and asked to be present on the autopsy. They declared they did not know the names of the physicians who came from Boston except that they came at the suggestion of some one in authority in the State.

Medical Examiner Leary's report states in opening that the autopsy disclosed that two of the patient's ribs were broken and in process of repair and also the finding of considerable internal abrasions. The witnesses at the autopsy are given as Drs. A. R. Evans, C. W. Tread and A. B. Davis of Lynn and Dr. C. R. Callender of Boston.

In the report it is stated there was a black and blue spot on the forehead, a scar other on the arm and a scab and discoloration on the internal aspect of the left knee.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

Pianos and Musical Instruments. Pianos and Musical Instruments.

THE

is the most wonderful player-piano in the world. This is because it is the

that allows the operator to display his own personal touch as though playing by hand. In other player-pianos the control of musical expression is sought by mechanical devices—with the result that the music sounds "mechanical."

In the HENRY F. MILLER PLAYER-PIANO the "touch" of the operator passes directly to the piano-action, thus realizing the long-sought desideratum in player-pianos—a player-piano that does not sound mechanical.

Until you have heard the new 88 note

you can have no conception of the artistic possibilities of player piano music.

We invite everyone interested (whether possible buyers or not) to come and listen to this wonderful instrument at our

BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JUNE 15, 1911

England's Argument and Mr. Knox's Double-Dealing.

There are a man and an argument mixed up with Reciprocity. Both will bear looking after. As to the argument—an unfair one, and as slight as it is unfair—it refers to the one-third tariff favoritism showed by Canada towards Great Britain.

Without pausing over the wisdom of such conditions, both Canada and the United States live under the greedy thumb of the protectionists. Both have protective tariffs.

To Great Britain, the mother country, Canada throws off a tariff one-third, and so lets down a partial bar. In response, Great Britain admits to her markets the goods of Canada free.

Those who would kill Reciprocity, and are seeking to arouse American jealousy to that lethal end, are harping great on that string of a Canadian tariff concession to Great Britain. It is cheating us, they say.

These protectionists, the Lumber Trust, the Wood Pulp Trust and generally the togaed trust tools of the Senate, so wailingly solicitous of American interests, should look to home. We have free trade with Porto Rico. We have Reciprocity with Cuba. We have made tariff things so softly easy between ourselves and the Philippines—the latter with a bigger census than Canada's—that it were a blushing and a shame to name them in the same breath with Canada's very natural concession to Great Britain. Until Canada says "Porto Rico" or "Cuba" or "Philippines" to us, we, as we knot our brows over Reciprocity, should never say "England" to her. If it be a question of playing favorites, why, then, Canada has the worst of it.

The man?

His name is Philander Knox, and as Secretary of State he sits at the Cabinet right hand of President Taft.

Mr. Knox is a protectionist of a first order of voracity.

Mr. Knox doesn't wholly like Mr. Taft, who is his chief. Mr. Taft does not wholly trust Mr. Knox, though he made him Secretary of State.

Mr. Knox plans the death of Reciprocity. As a measure having Republican effect, it makes solely for the grace of Mr. Taft. It assists that President to be popular, stiffens him with the people. Mr. Taft made the deal with Mr. Laurier without help from Mr. Knox. This, since he is Secretary of State, sets the jealousy of Mr. Knox on edge.

In his triangular character of Cabineteer, candidate and trust lawyer—he is as submissive to trust influence and trust interest as any Elihu Root—Mr. Knox goes scheming and planning the downfall of Reciprocity. As he goes thus planning and scheming, he has the Mephistophelian counsel of Mr. Root. Which is as though a viper had come to the poisonous counsel of a rattlesnake. Between the two, be sure, there should arise no lack of venom.

Urged by the trusts, advised by Mr. Root, moved of a jealous envy of Mr. Taft, thinking of the public only as something to be exploited and stripped, Mr. Knox went the other day before the Senate committee considering Reciprocity. The doors were locked so that none—neither Mr. Taft nor the public—should hear.

Thus guarded, Mr. Knox, White House candidate and trust beloved Cabineteer, told the committee that Reciprocity would be a violation of our understanding with England, Germany and France, and serve to gangrene our relations with those nations, if it did not do worse. Mr. Knox went into a wealth of argument and fact-detail, and had much to say of "favored nation" clauses, in support of his position. He explained, too, that he had sought the committee not so much to give evidence as to offer a word of warning. Reciprocity was a snare, a trap, a deadfall, which we ought to avoid. In a final expression it might even mean war.

The anti-Reciprocity Senators on the committee winked and blinked and looked as wise as a treeful of owls. They were delighted in a twilight way with the testimony of Mr. Knox. It uplifted, cheered and warmed the owlish cockles of their hearts. It should not be printed, it must not get out. Later they would use it on the floor of the Senate. Not publicly, not openly. The Senate would go conveniently into "executive session."

What Mr. Knox did, and give it most tolerant description, was bald treason to Mr. Taft. Nor should the latter let the treason pass unnoticed. Mr. Taft has heard what happens to a house divided against itself. What is true of a house is true of an administration. Mr. Knox was striving to plant a knife between the White House ribs of Mr. Taft. If he has failed—and time must show that—his failure should be charged not to any tenderness of motive, but to mere badness of aim.

Mr. Taft should cashier Mr. Knox, strip him of his portfolio. Mr. Knox intends to resign. In the slang of the day, Mr. Taft should "beat him to it."

It is no part of this paper's business to spread protecting pinion over Mr. Taft. None the less, he should rid himself of both Mr. Knox and Mr. Root. With him, but to use him, their very presence is a peril. One from Pennsylvania, the other from New York, as the Gold Dust Twins of pirate Money they carry briefs for the trusts. From every standpoint of his fortunes, Mr. Taft should be rid of them. To continue them in his affairs were about as wise as setting a brace of coyotes to herding sheep.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

MR. HITCHCOCK AND ECONOMY

Editor AMERICAN:

It's a pleasure to me to see the AMERICAN first to congratulate Postmaster-General Hitchcock on his accomplishment in bringing the United States postoffice to a self-supporting basis.

Your editorial concerning him is very deserving, and you show good judgment in giving credit where it is due.

If Mr. Hitchcock's great work in wiping out the annual deficit of our postoffice should serve as an inspiring example to city and State officials. It is about time that Boston stopped piling up debts and did something likewise. The success of Mr. Hitchcock should give us confidence.

Wouldn't it be a grand thing if our prominent citizens and civic bodies should co-operate in striving for economy so that by 1915 we would have the best and freest city in the world?

FAVORS SUNDAY BASEBALL

Editor AMERICAN:

What real harm from playing baseball on Sundays?

Much better indulge in the sport of an invigorating nature than to stand about and indulge in idle, loose and non-valuable talk.

What's better than physical development? Baseball gives action to the mind, body, legs and arms, generating a healthy condition, especially at a time of the year when such sport is in order.

Wherein the harm? For a healthy citizenship calls for a vigorous manhood.

A DANGEROUS BRIDGE

Editor AMERICAN:

I wish you would call the attention of the Bridge Commissioners to the very dangerous condition of the bridge between Winthrop and East Boston. It is pretty nigh a death trap, and since it was examined it has grown worse. On the Winthrop side large stones are falling continually from under the bridge, and it needs immediate attention.

A Bill in the Interests of Humanity

The bill prohibiting irresponsible attendants from being judges of the necessity for applying the straitjacket and other forms of violent and degrading restraints upon the unfortunate inmates of our asylums, ought to receive the approval of everyone who recognizes the brotherhood of man and the universal imperfections of us all.

In these public and private asylums, are unfortunate fellow citizens whose lives have been as good or better than ours, but upon whom an inscrutable fate has seemed to lay a heavier hand than upon us.

These unfortunate men and women have brothers and sisters, fathers and mothers and children, who hold them as dearly as the more fortunate are held.

To subject them to the varying moods of under-paid attendants with the power to torture, is barbaric and ought not to be allowed in this Commonwealth.

It is sad enough that there are occasions when these forms of restraint must be applied. But those occasions should be adjudged by the responsible and trained heads of the institution.

An Interesting Interview

William R. Hearst Talks to a Representative of the London Evening Standard.

From the London Evening Standard, June 3

Mr. William Randolph Hearst, America's most famous newspaper proprietor, and owner of a chain of allied dailies throughout the United States, arrived in London to-day, and after witnessing the Coronation ceremonies will pay a visit to the Continent.

As a shrewd observer of international affairs, Mr. Hearst had many things of interest to say to one of our representatives, to whom he accorded an interview to-day. Alluding in the first instance to reciprocity, Mr. Hearst expressed himself heartily in its favor.

"I think it will be of great benefit both to the United States and Canada," he said, "and I consider it will be of further benefit in tending to bring these two great English-speaking nations closer together. We have reached a period when that seems to be exceedingly desirable.

"No," remarked Mr. Hearst replying to an interruption as to his reported Anglophobe tendencies, "I am not against England and I am an ardent American, and I am not at all opposed to England, except when I think that English actions or interests conflict with American interests. I am naturally for my own country first and all the time, and I have on occasions objected to matters like the alliance between England and Japan, which I feared might be injurious to my own country."

Arbitration is another subject in which Mr. Hearst is a staunch believer. "I do not think that there can be any two ideas on the advantages of arbitration," he declared. "War is simply a relic of barbarism. War among nations is as much out of place as an armed knight would be careering up the Strand or up Broadway. Arbitration is the only natural and intelligent solution of all debated questions between civilized nations, and we are becoming civilized.

"I sincerely trust, therefore, that the treaty will be ratified. If it is it will be one of the strongest possible influences to prevent any further war."

Mr. Hearst, like the Democrat he is, was very emphatic in his opinion on the question of the reform of the House of Lords. "Americans of progressive views," he pointed out, "have a natural sympathy with the attempts of the Radicals here to benefit the people and to remove obstructions, as we hold, in the way of measures tending to that end.

"There is in America a movement similar to that for the modification of the House of Lords. It is a movement to change the character of the United States Senate, which is largely an obstructive body. The desire is to bring about the election of Senators by the direct vote of the people rather than by Legislatures of the States, as at present.

"That movement, by the way, is going to be successful within a very short period. It has already reached a point where, while there is not a direct election of Senators by the people, there is in some States a plan by which the choice of the people for Senators is indicated on the ballot and the Legislatures invariably follow that indicated choice. The movement here seems to me to be very much along the same lines."

Little Bobbie

He Writes About A Baseball Game

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

Pa took me up to the baseball gaim yesterday. Pa tried to git in the opening day, but they wouldent let him git through the gate beekaus the grounds was full. He showed his card to the man at the gate, but the man red it seems like a fairly good looking card. So we went aggein yesterday.

I like baseball very much, but it always maiks me nervus wen I go to the gaim with Pa. I have never went to a gaim yet with Pa that he didest git into sum kind of a fite, & I am aggenst fiteing of all kinds. Ma sed that the best fiters in the histry of the world was the men with bald the other men how to do the fiteing.

Yesterday was jest the gaim as all the other days. Beefore we left the house for to go to the gaim, Ma sed to Pa, Now, husband, be sure that you beehave yureself at this gaim & keep out of trubbel. Deant git into any arguments with the men setting neer you. If you must talk, talk to little Bobbie.

It was all rite the first few innings. Pa was hollering for the Red Sox, but he was hollering sirsis sihd & didest pay any attenshun to the peepul setting around him. We was gitting along fine till a big man with hair on his neck hollerd Git back on the bench, Donovan, you trubbel maiker.

Parding me, sed Pa, Donovan is not a trubbel maiker. I have known him for many yeers & I always take a man the way I find him. Then the man with hair on his neck sed to Pa Say, Bo, I deant care how you talk a man or how you find him, but if you throw any mour talk at me, nobobdy will ever find you exep the coroner, now let that soak in. What made Donovan jump from Brooklyn to the American League?

If you ever lived in Brooklyn, Pa sed to the man, you wuddent ask me that questun. Why, Pa sed, the only thing that ced keep me in Brooklyn wud be a fot of iron bars, cries cros.

We dount want yure kind in Brooklyn exeep beehind iron bars, the big man sed to Pa. Git it out, Pa, I sed, deant git into any mix ups, but Pa was mad then & he kep rite on talking.

So you are from Brooklyn, he sed, well, well, well. I knew at a glanst that you wasent a Bostonian. Why deant you ask the head barber to amputate that fuss from yure neck? Why dident you change yure collar this morning?

Stranger, the man sed to Pa, you are walking on vary thin ice. It may brake any moment.

Let it brake, sed Pa, what do I care. I was always a good swimmer. I guess I can get out of anything I fall into. & if you ever say any mour about Donovan in my presence, Pa sed, you will have to answer to me.

I will start in answering rite now, sed the big man, & he went to talk a swing at Pa but I tripped him & he fell over into the next row & hit so hard that he ouddent git up.

Cum on, Bobbie, sed Pa, the poor devil has had enuff. So we went away & sat in a other part of the stand, & Pa sed Bobbie, I deant want you to be a fiteing man like yure father, but if you find, wen you grow up, that you must fite, hit only one blow, & hit to kill. Hit the way I hit that poor devil from Brooklyn, sed Pa, & dident say anything, beekaus I red in the Sunday paiper that wen folks gits old they must be humored.
